Marketing Genetics Through Flushing, Exporting Embryos

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEWMANSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — While exporting dairy cattle and bred heifers is one of the major ways individual dairy farmers can enjoy exporting, others have found faster turnaround on investment and ready markets for high quality frozen embryos.

The number of dairy cattle breeders who regularly flush heifers and sell embryos has been growing, according to those involved in the business.

For Kirby and Cheryl Horst of Newmanstown, flushing and exporting frozen eggs has helped their business.

Depending on the index, markets exist for certain combinations of genetics, and virgin heifers are even being flushed, depending on index, and sold because of the potential value they hold in making faster leaps in genetic improvement.

Again, that value is speculative. There is no guarantee that a recipient cow will accept a top quality fertilized embryo, or that a specific mix of genes will actually result in a superior animal.

Therefore, the price negotiated for an embryo is much less compared to the price for a bred heifer of equally high index (some have suggested a fifth of the price), but there's the opportunity to sell more, have more cash on hand, and the buyer has the opportunity to break into ownership of top quality genetics with less capital investment.

For the Horsts, one of their current top flushing cows was an investment made last November, when they paid $17,000 for Juniper Mascot Rosebud, with 76-pounds of protein on index.

One of their first flushing investments was purchased as a calf and has been flushed 23 times with 50 embryos sold and about 90 percent of those being exported overseas. Kirby said he expected that she probably will wind up with 40 calves.

Purchased from a Virginia farm as a 3-month-old calf, Windcrest Leadman Jessie embryos have gone to buyers in Australia, England, France, Holland and Japan.

The Horsts said they credit her with helping to finance a barn expansion completed in January.

"She'll probably wind up with 12 bulls in artificial insemination," Kirby said recently. Jessie classified as a Very Good 89 with an excellent mammary as a 2-year-

U. of Pa. Holds New Bolton Open House

KENNETT SQUARE (Chester Co.) — For the first time in many years, Uniyersity of Pennsylvania's School of Veterinary Medicine held an open house at New Bolton Center, the school's rural campus for large animals.

Although Saturday, September 23, proved to be a cloudy and somewhat raw day, a record crowd of more than 6,000 showed up to tour the hospital facilities.

Receiving maps for a self-guided tour, people were treated to a firsthand look at surgery rooms, ultrasound/cardiology and radiology departments, laser surgery, pool recovery, treadmill, scintigraphy, and adult intensive care.

Penn State Strives To Get A Handle On Flies

ANDY ANDREWS

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Fly control has always been a headache for the poultry and livestock producer. Where do producers go to stem the explosion of those pesky culprits?

At this year's Housing Expo, scheduled next Wednesday and Thursday at the Lebanon Fairgrounds, Penn State will feature displays of the latest research on fly control methods, including some intriguing research that could prove beneficial.

The fly problem "is serious, and traditional chemical controls are not nearly as effective as they were at one time," said Leon Ressler.

Ressler, Lancaster County ag environment agent who deals with farm/urban interface issues, is helping to conduct a Penn State-sponsored study to examine ways to reduce fly populations in manure.

One study examines ways to cover manure with plastic to reduce fly populations. A poultry producer makes a 7-8 foot high manure windrow which is covered with 6-mil black plastic and covered over, completely sealed like a trench silo. In it, ammonia gas, which builds up naturally from the manure, effectively kills the fly population.

The black plastic could be used a number of times, which would make it "worth your money" said Ressler. "There's no reason, as long as the plastic isn't torn, why you couldn't reuse it."

The plastic has to be sealed "pretty well," for two weeks, said Ressler. Producers must keep the edges covered to prevent fly populations from escaping.

Pat Shea, who manages 216,000 layers for Wenger's Feed in Shartlesville, recently participated in a Penn State-sponsored fly control study on his farm. In June this year, after collecting several tons of layer manure from his houses, the manure (at a moisture level of 60 percent) was moved to a distant part of his farm, dumped in a row at the edge of a field and covered with 6-mil black plastic, measuring 100 feet by 25 feet, and sealed over with dirt.

Before covering, Penn State Extension agents inspected the manure and found many fly larvae and pupae. Some measurement of the presence of ammonia was undertaken. After two weeks, the plastic was removed, indicating little odor — and the presence of dead fly material.

Using the black plastic to cover the manure to reduce the fly popu-

To monitor the flies, 10 cards are used per house. One card observed by Donald Burkholder in Host recently had hardly any fly markings at all. Fly control research is one of many programs featured at the Penn State displays at next week's Livestock Housing Expo.

Lancaster Farming A Big 40!

It was 40 years ago, on Nov. 4, 1955, that the first issue of Lancaster Farming appeared in rural mailboxes. Since then, every week, Lancaster Farming has continued to supply news, advertising and markets to more readers than ever in fact, more than 60,000 copies of Lancaster Farming are distributed each week.

Housing Expo Schedule Covers Building Know-How, Cow Comfort

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — The 1995 Animal Housing Expo is scheduled Nov. 8-9 here at the Lebanon Fairgrounds.

"The purpose of the expo is to help farmers in the Northeast learn more about animal housing concerns," said Dan McFarland, general chair of the expo and York County extension agent.

National Grain Market

ST. JOSEPH, MO
NOVEMBER 1, 1995

Grain and soybean bids were moderately to sharply higher on continued climb in corn bids and tight US wheat stocks. Corn and soybean bids were supported by fairly good export demand, additional fund buying and additional new contract highs were noted. Wheat 1 to 5 cents higher. Corn 4 to 6 cents higher. Sorghum 7 to 9 cents higher. Soybeans 5 to 10 cents higher. Wheat bids reacted positively to further strength in corn bids. Indications that USDA may tap its 142 million bushels Food Security Wheat reserve to meet food aid commitments during fiscal 1996. This would tight US Wheat stocks even further and push wheat bids higher. Corn received additional export orders from South Korea today, pushing their total buy thus far over 500,000 tonnes for the week. Also, Midwest rainfall the past couple of days has delayed corn harvest. Many farmers have found that their corn crop is still too wet and could take a few more weeks before storage bids can be filled. Soybean bids were supported by improved export demand and fund buying on the board. New contract highs were set today and many traders are changing from November contracts to January.

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC This Week With

NOVEMBER 6-12, 1995

FULL BEAVER MOON, NOV. 7.

CHOOSE YOUR CELEBRATION

November 11 marks not only Sadie Hawkin's Day (Al Capp's invention as part of his Li'l Abner cartoons), but also Veterans Day, St. Martin's (Martinmas in Germany and England), and the commencement of Indian Summer, a period of unseasonably warm weather. Sadie Hawkin's, celebrated since 1938, means girls get to pursue the boys. Veterans Day marks the World War I cease-fire in 1918. Congress changed its name from Armistice Day to Veterans Day in 1954 and dedicated the holiday to world peace. St. Martin was patron saint of drunkards, beggars, and outcasts. The Full Beaver Moon will be just waning, so choose your occasion and celebrate accordingly.

Mirth makes the banquet sweet.

TIP OF THE WEEK

To wash wooden floors, mix 1/4 cup glass cleaner per gallon of water.

INDIAN SUMMER APPLESAUCE

4 quarts (1/2 peck) apples,
2 cups sugar
3 or 4 purple plums, pitted juice from 1/2 to 1 lemon to taste cinnamon
nutmeg

Wash and quarter apples and plums to fill a 4-quart pot. (No need to peel or core apples.) Add 2 cups water, cover and boil until apples are soft and the peels are falling off. Add 2 cups sugar, or adjust to taste. Simmer another couple of minutes, until sugar is dissolved. Pour by small amounts into a food mill or other sieve, and press out the applesauce, discarding peels, seeds, and cores. Stir lemon juice cinnamon, and nutmeg into applesauce. Can in the usual manner, freeze in freezer bags, or refrigerate until used. Makes about 2 quarts.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

Where the wind is on Martinmas Eve (Nov. 10), there it will be for the rest of winter.

If the weather is dry and cold on St. Martin's Day, the winter will not last long.

If a cloud looks as if it had been scratched by a hen, Get ready to reef your topsails then.

OPINION

Dog Law Reform

The state's new Dog Law regulations are not in reaction to complaints from animal rights activists or their pawns.

These were a crafted set of revised regulations to bring the state up to date and level with regulations at the federal level.

Nothing more should be read into it, but of course people will.

Sometimes news is real, accurate, informative and educational.

Many times it is nothing but cheap entertainment.

Despite the so-called "investigative" reports by news crews with secret cameras trying to cash in on the popularity of the "puppy mills," officials at the state level and many within the state's dog industry know that the industry as a whole is far from being tolerant of cruelty and neglect.

The dog breeding industry is large in Pennsylvania.

But most breeders do not make money by selling neglected, mistreated, or malnourished dogs.

The possibility of civil or criminal charges and the associated costs in money and reputation is enough to prevent that.

Nevertheless, in every human activity there are always some people whose sloth, disregard or incompetence disgraces and demeans the respectable work engaged in by others.

All the tax-run programs in the world won't do anything if people don't have the courage to adultly address situations they encounter, and to not patronize, recommend, or condone substandard or obviously negligent behavior.

The recent change in the state Department of Agriculture's regulations were created to bring state regulations up to federal standards, and to make some clarifications, so as to prevent misunderstandings about what is expected in mimimal care and facilities for keeping dogs.

The PDA Bureau of Dog Law is working with those in the dog industry to improve the ability of the state to serve the dog industry — from those who breed dogs to those who buy dogs.

There are some dog-marketing channels that by their nature can't guarantee the conditions of the parent dogs or whether or not proper vaccinations or papers exist. Those channels have served a useful purpose, especially during times when neutering farm pets was prohibitively expensive.

There is still a place for that dog-marketing business, and there are still outlets serving it, but it does not represent the main stream of the dog breeding industry.

The mainstream dog breeding industry is operated by state and federally licensed kennels.

There are a few people out there who perhaps should try to find something else to do that better matches their interests, skills and abilities than breeding dogs.

But that's true with every industry and every activity and job.

The majority of the Pennsylvania dog breeding industry has been and appears that it will continue to be something of which to be proud.

To Attend Animal Housing Expo

The 1995 Animal Housing Expo will be held Nov. 8-9 at the Lebanon Fairgrounds.

It is designed for farmers interested in upgrading their livestock, poultry or dairy facilities or in building new facilities.

The Expo will give ideas on ways to improve the animal's environment to enhance its health and comfort and boast production efficiency. Or you may learn how to create a better working environment and improve labor efficiency.

At the Expo, farmers will be able to hear a variety of presentations and see numerous exhibits related to animal care and housing.

The Expo is sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension and local agribusinesses. Admission is free.

For more details, see related articles in this issue of the Lancaster Farming.

To Plan For Fall Feeding

Early fall signals the time most beef cows in Pennsylvania will be at the lowest feed requirement for the year, according to Chester Hughes, extension livestock agent.

This means there may be some ways to lower feed costs and save expensive hay or stockpile pastures.

Some feeding alternatives to consider are:

• Use stalk or stubble fields to extend fall grazing. Allow about one-fourth acre per cow and increase acreage weekly. Failure to limit acreage will result in poor use of the field.

• Use your worst quality hay first. You may wish to limit grazing for a few weeks and feed the poorer quality hay.

• Graze older cows behind younger cows with calves or newly weaned calves in a pasture rotation.

• Use some food by-products. Apple pomace is a good cow feed either fresh or ensiled, but do not add urea to it. Potato chips and bakery wastes are good sources of energy, but cows will still need a lot of fiber. Fresh vegetables are fine, but with pregnant cows, watch for mold and protein levels in legumes.

To Look For Frost Damage

If temperatures reach freezing before corn or soybeans reach full maturity, damage will occur.

According to Robert Anderson, extension agronomy agent, corn reaches maturity when the black layer is formed at the base of the kernel. Soybeans reach maturity when the bean pods are no longer green. At maturity, neither crop will accumulate any more dry matter.

Frost before maturity will reduce both quality and yields. The characteristics of frost damaged corn include small and misshapen soft kernels, pithy kernel, and breakage of a high percentage of kernels.

Low test weight below 45 pounds per bushel will result in low protein levels and low digestibility. Green beans are often difficult to extract oil from and the oil content is reduced.

The best use of frosted corn is animal feed. However, it should be tested and diets reformulated. Fungi are often a problem and should be checked for in storage. Expect storage time to be reduced by as much as 50 percent.

Livestock feed may be the best use for immature soybeans. Processors will discount for green soybeans based on the color definition in U.S. Grades.

FAILURE OR SUCCESS?
November 5, 1995

FAILURE OR SUCCESS?
November 5, 1995

Background Scripture:
Acts 13 through 14
Devotional Reading:
Acts 13:13-26

When I was younger — when in fact, I knew everything — I thought I pretty well knew what was success and what was failure. Today, however, I realize that much that I thought was successful wasn't, and often what I thought was failure turned out to be something else. In fact, I seem to have learned that, not only is it difficult sometimes to tell the one from the other, but that neither is nearly so important as I once thought.

Vince Lombardi, the great football coaching immortal, is said to have remarked, "Whoever said, 'It doesn't matter whether you win or lose, it's how you play the game,' couldn't have been a coach." To a large degree, he was right: football coaches get hired to win victories and fired when they have too many defeats. As one who started his journalistic career as a sports writer, I know that school alumni and professional football clubs are much concerned about how their teams play the game if they lose it!

PLUS AND MINUS

But that doesn't mean that living by that perspective makes for successful living. Some of the unhappiest people I have known are those who have been professionally and economically successful. Correspondingly, I have known lots of people who never achieved professional prominence or economic prosperity and yet in my eyes were very successful as human beings.

When I read Paul and Barnabas' report on their first missionary journey to the Christian congregation at Antioch, I was interested to see how they would report their experiences. In secular terms, the mission was not a resounding success. They had been driven out of Antioch of Pisidia (another Antioch); at Iconium they were soundly opposed and they fled for their lives; at Lystra they were initially wildly successful but eventually stoned and expelled from the city. In some of the cities they had caused deep divisions in the Jewish community itself, and sometimes between Jews and Gentiles. On the plus-side, there were many people who gladly heard and responded to their message; some churches were established.

Paul and Barnabas, standing up to report to the people of Antioch, the church that had sent them out, might have complained bitterly about the way they were treated on their journey, the hardships they had to endure, the fickleness of the populations. But, the writer of Acts says their report was definitely upbeat: "And when they arrived, they gathered the church together and declared all that God had done with them and how he had opened a door of faith to the Gentiles" (14:27,28).

OBSTACLES OR DOORS?

Note: not a word about whether they had succeeded or failed in their mission. The negative experiences they had along the way were interpreted, not as obstacles or defeats, but as a "door" opened to them by God. The way they "played the game" had actually been of more importance than whether someone decided that they had lost or won. The "way they played the game" was one of obedience to the task, even in the face of hostility and defeat.

Later, writing to the Corinthians, Paul saw his work from this perspective, not in terms of success or failure: "I planted, Apollos waters, but God gave the growth. So neither he who plants nor he who waters is anything, but only God who gives the growth" (I Cor. 3:6,7). We do what we can and leave to God the questions of ultimate success or failure. Obedience, not success, is what we're called to.

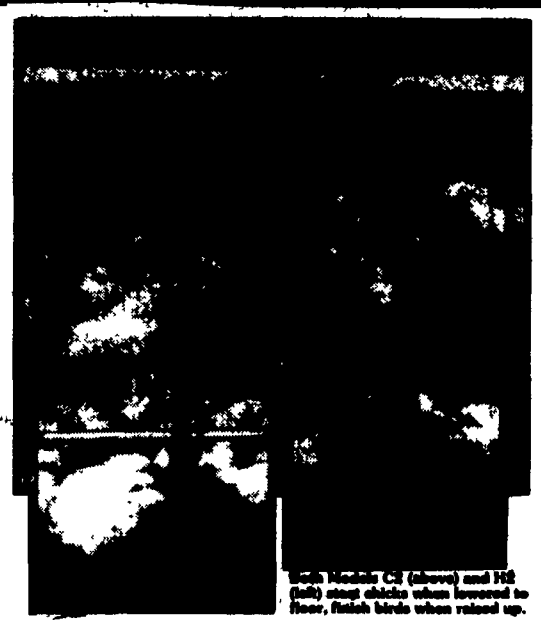
CHORE-TIME ...nobody knows more about feeding



Chore-Time Models C2 (above) and H2 (left) start chicks when lowered to floor, finish birds when raised up.

The Right Choice in broiler feeders

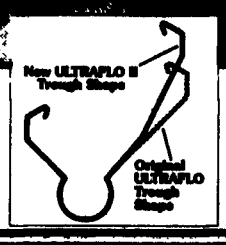
Feed broilers and pullets your way! As the world leader in poultry feeding systems, Chore-Time offers you the best choices in feeders. You will love what our newest feeders —the Model C2™ and Model H2™—do for you.

Features include (1) labor-saving Patented Feed Windows that open to let chicks eat from day one—without additional feed on paper or "lids", (2) feed-saving features like easy feed adjustment settings, and (3) cost-saving all-plastic designs with Chore-Time Warranty.

Pick a Chore-Time feeding system—including our rugged feed bins and Genuine Chore-Time FLEX-AUGER® Feed Delivery System, plus ventilation—and you know you've made the Right Choice—because it's from Chore-Time, the leader!

CHORE-TIME EQUIPMENT
Milford, Indiana

New Shape
The difference is the shape of the feeder's trough (at right). ULTRAFLO II's higher trough lip reduces feed waste by keeping it in the trough and not on the floor or in the pit.



The Right Choice in cage feeders

Chore-Time's popular ULTRAFLO® Cage Feeding System is now even more outstanding! We've developed and tested the second generation of ULTRAFLO feeders and named it the ULTRAFLO® II.

ULTRAFLO II offers you even greater reliability, durability, and outstanding feed-saving performance—up to 1 gram of feed per bird per day—over the original ULTRAFLO. And even the original ULTRAFLO was beating our competitors in feed savings!

So, join the cage feeding leader. Contact us today. Find out how Chore-Time and ULTRAFLO II can help you be a leader, too!

The Grange, which is also a fraternal Order, will confer the highest degree of the Order to eligible members on Sat., Nov. 19, at the Zembo Mosque in Harrisburg.

There are over 31,000 Grange members in Pennsylvania, 448 local chapters, and 82 Junior chapters. The State Grange was organized in 1873.

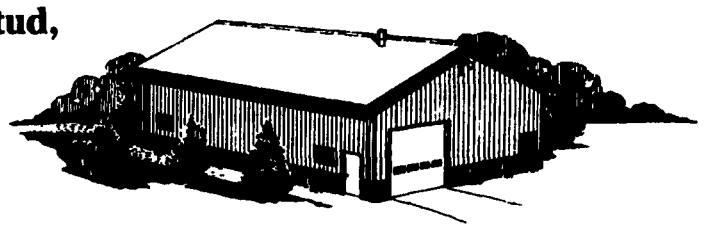
The Building you want. The Lease you need.

Whether your new farm or commercial building is of pole, timber column, stud, steel or block construction; choose Telmark lease financing.



Telmark has been leasing equipment for over 30 years. Did you know that we've been leasing new buildings for that long too? Consider the features:

- Tax deductibility and accelerated write-offs: Lease payments are income tax deductible over the term of the lease compared to 20-year depreciation of farm buildings and 39-year depreciation of commercial buildings. Could reduce tax liability this year.
- Low upfront costs: Beginning costs may be as little as one monthly lease payment.
- Flexible lease term: Building lease terms start aggressively at five years but may be as long as ten, twelve, or fifteen years.
- Customized payment schedules: Lease payment schedules match your cash flow. Payment options include monthly, quarterly, annually, as well as, skip or specially designed seasonal payments.

How do you start leasing a building from Telmark? Talk with a qualified builder to determine your needs and building cost. And call your Telmark representative:

Get A Handle On Flies

lation was an experiment that worked well.

"This was a trial situation," said Clyde Myers, Berks extension agent. "We wanted to find out if it would work."

"We found out that it did work," said Shea.

Researchers thought that heat could have been a factor. But it wasn't.

What killed the flies was the ammonia produced from the manure.

"We think that's what actually is killing the fly larvae and pupae," said Dr. Charles Pitts, Penn State fly expert. "It kills practically everything in there."

Pitts indicated that Penn State research is under way to investigate different concentrations of ammonia in the laboratory to see just how much it takes to kill flies.

Shea was happy with the results of the experiment. His concern was that the manure he tried to sell could pose a problem after it was spread on the field. Shea is convinced that, with a little extra labor, he could save on traditional chemical fly control costs and produce an environmentally friendly product.

Flies swarm around a calf hutch bucket. Flies continue to be a problem for producers, but Penn State has some effective ways to control them at this year's expo.

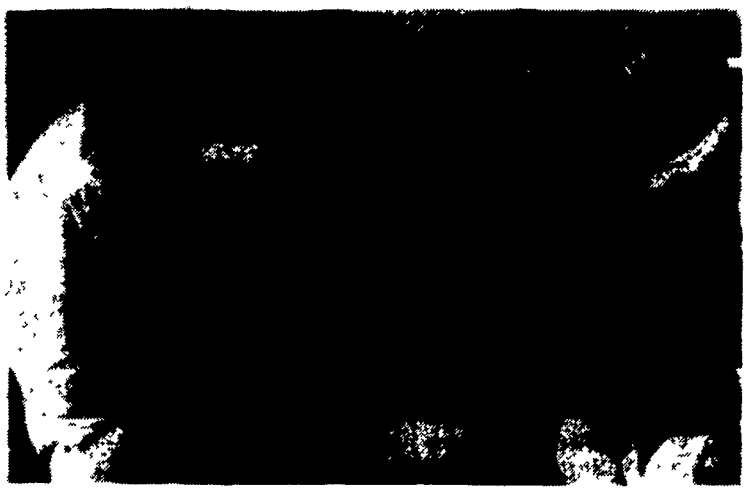
"Environmentally friendly" can translate into better neighbor relations, important for farm survivability.

But Pitts cautioned that these concerns are prevalent for any producer that handles any type of manure.

"There's more than poultry manure that's causing the problem," he said. "It's not just poultry. I don't think we can give it all to the poultry people."

Shea said that ideally, for him, the best system would be some type of accessible concrete manure storage platform that could serve as a treatment fly control center. The finished product could then be a valuable nutrient resource.

"This is just another tool," said Pitts. "All of this has to come within some sort of framework of a management decision. (A producer) can't just stop everything and do what we want him to do and then lose money on top of it."



According to Clyde Myers, Berks extension agent, right, the barrels are placed near calf hutches. A bait (using a variety of material, including spoiled milk, dead birds, feed, or commercially available fly trap lure) is placed under a funnel screen. The flies enter the screen and are trapped.

Producers may want to consider, if they have a "hot" house (that may have lots of fly larvae and pupae), that before spreading in spring and fall, they would cover the manure for two weeks first to handle the fly problem.

Another study, conducted on Lancaster County fields, is examining ways in which plowing impacts survival of the eggs, larvae, and pupae in the field.

A big problem is field hatch of flies. When the manure is spread on the field, unless it is buried, fly populations have the potential to "explode." The study has found that moldboard plowing is the best way to control flies, because the fly material is buried.

Other tillage methods, such as chiseling or discing, are ineffective and may actually help boost field hatch because the material isn't sufficiently buried.

"If you can bury them deep enough, then the more difficult it is for them to emerge after they pupate," said Reasler.

Reasler said that studies this past summer, including extremely hot days in July and August, showed that the heat itself may have done as much to reduce fly populations without any kind of plowing.

Several farms in Berks County are participating in a Penn State-sponsored study that is examining the use of 55-gallon barrels and 5-gallon plastic jugs to act as fly traps. Those farms include Roy Hetrick, dairy farmer in Bernville; Paul Moyer; and the Teen Challenge Dairy Farms.

According to Clyde Myers, Berks extension agent, the barrels are placed near calf hutches. A bait (using a variety of material, including spoiled milk, dead birds, feed, or commercially available fly trap lure) is placed under a funnel screen. The flies enter the screen and are trapped.

What works best is a milk and yeast combination that has proven successful, according to Myers. New work involves 5-gallon buckets, which have proven effective. A bait can be colostrum milk in the fermentation stage (the sweet/sour state).

Another Penn State study examines ways in which "photoactivated" dyes are spread on the fly larvae. When exposed to sunlight, the dyes create a chemical reaction which kills the flies. The challenge is being able to sufficiently cover the larvae with the dye material.

"There's still a lot of work to be done to see if it can be useful on a practical basis," said Ressler.

(Turn to Page A26)

Other research work involves using parasitic wasps to control the fly population.

At the Donald Burkholder farm in Host, special parasitic wasps wander the manure pit piles underneath layer houses. Burkholder, who manages two houses (one with 110,000 birds and the other with 125,000 birds) for Wenger's Feeds, said he is "completely sold" on the use of the wasps.

They have dramatically reduced the fly populations in both houses, saving him money.

He said it was a "cheap investment" that goes a long way to reduce costs of fogging. The wasps cost $330 per house.

To monitor the flies, 10 cards are used per house. One house measures 600 feet long. One card observed recently had hardly any fly markings at all. Before, when a person would enter the house, flies would swarm the length of the house. Egg fly droppings were a constant problem. Now, after entering the house, with the use of wasps, only a few flies are present.

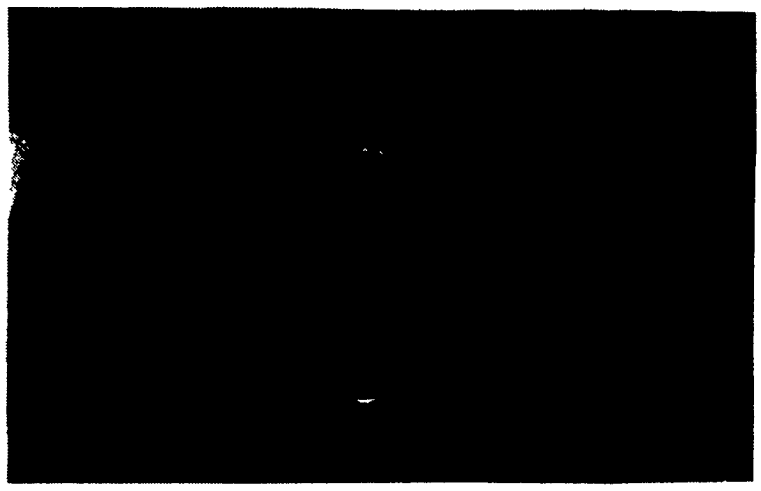
"It really works," he said. "I'm totally sold on the idea." Estimated savings are in the thousands of dollars per year.

"Right now, we're looking at everything that we can think of to control flies," said Ressler. "As the urban population increases, the problem becomes more severe."

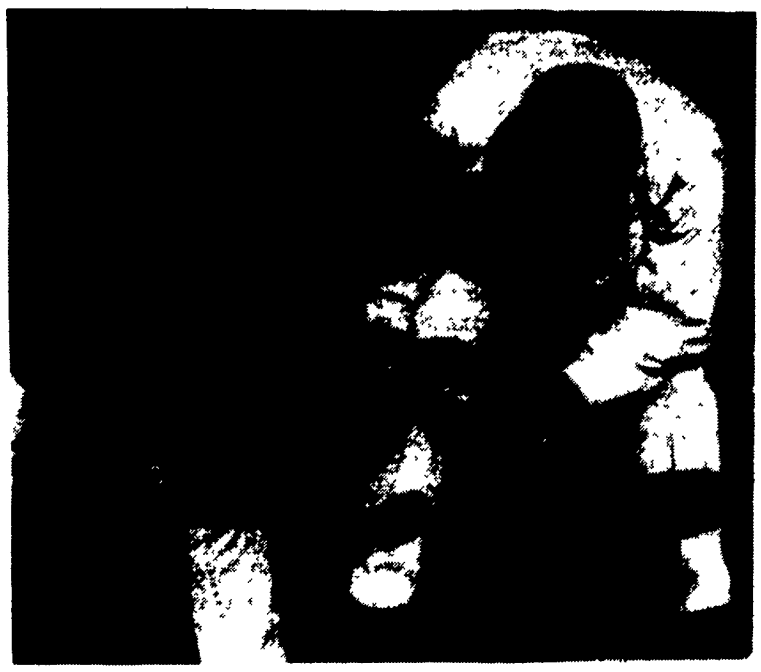
The Lancaster County extension office, and other extension offices throughout the state, field calls of complaints of flies from suburban farm neighbors.

"The other thing that is compounding it is nutrient management concerns," said Ressler. "We're taking manure to fields that in recent years haven't had manure. The fields are often near suburban people. So when you put manure on those fields, it does a good thing as far as spreading nutrients around, but you also spread the flies in there and non-farm people won't be particularly happy."

(Turn to Page A27)



The parasitic wasps have invaded the fly larvae, effectively killing them, in the manure pit in one of Donald Burkholder's layer houses.



Before covering, Penn State extension agents inspected the manure, containing fly larvae and pupae. Some measurement of the presence of ammonia was undertaken. After two weeks, the plastic was removed, indicating little odor — and the presence of dead fly material. Here, Clyde Meyers, left, and Charles Pitts inspect the covered manure.

It is a challenge, because, Ressler said, "in the southeast here, there aren't many fields that aren't near a neighborhood."

Admission to the expo is free.

On Wednesday's program, scheduled speakers include Tim Royer, who will address the topic, "Avoiding Building Failures"; Dr. Gordon Jones, veterinarian, who will speak about "A Vet's Commonsense Perspective of Cow Comfort, With A Focus On the Tiestall Barns"; "Your Business — Will It Continue On Into the Future?" by Gary Heim, attorney, Mette, Evens and Woodside, in addition to Liz Brown, tax consultant and preparer.

Included on Thursday's program is Doug Wallick, Agway Insurance, "Do You Have Sufficient Coverage?"; "Paying Attention To Swine Production Details" by a veterinarian-producer panel; and Gordon Jones's topic, "A Vet's Commonsense Perspective of Cow Comfort With A Focus On Freestall Barns."

Dr. Gordon Jones is a veterinarian from Oconto Falls, Wis. He said about 95 percent of his private practice involves dairy farms, situated about 35 miles north of Green Bay. Jones received his bachelor's in dairy science from Michigan State in 1974 and his DVM from Michigan State in 1977. He has been practicing since 1977.

The unique Millcreek Row Mulcher eliminates all the hand labor for mulching.

Finally, a practical way to apply organic mulch to row crops

Organic mulch is the natural way to suppress weeds, help retain soil moisture, and improve soil conditions. Trouble is, hand mulching takes too much time and effort. Now the Millcreek Row Mulcher makes it easy and affordable to mulch berries, grapes, fruit trees, and other row crops. One operator can mulch an acre in just a couple hours depending on conditions.

Spread A Variety of Materials, Including Lime

You can spread all types of stemless flowable mulches, such as wood chips, sawdust, chopped bark, even compost, with plenty of clearance to avoid plant damage. Plus, the Millcreek Row Mulcher is ideal for banding lime and other materials requiring lighter applications. The optional metering gate gives you complete control of the coverage so you can tailor applications to best suit your cultivation practices. With the labor-saving versatility you get with the Millcreek Row Mulcher, you may even find new techniques to grow better crops.

For Small Growers
This may be the affordable machine you've been looking for to mulch berries, grapes, and other row crops. Think of the labor you'll save.

For Commercial Growers

Adams Farm Bureau Meets

CASHTOWN (Adams Co.) — The 45th annual meeting of the Adams County Farm Bureau was held on Thursday, Sept. 28, here at the Cashtown Community Fire Hall with approximately 100 farm family members in attendance.

The following board of directors was elected to a two-year term for their respective districts: District I: Bob Clowney, District II: Harry Irwin, District III: Lynn Kime, District IV: John Peters, District V: Larry Feeser, and District VI: Kenneth Kehr.

The board of directors will select the delegates to attend the PFB Convention in November. Four delegates will attend each event during the three-day event to be held Nov. 13-15.

Resolutions were submitted during the annual meeting for consideration by the general membership for policies to be enacted.

Membership chairperson Joel Waybright reported that 507 members had paid to date, including 19 new. This is 15 percent ahead of the numbers calculated last year at the same time. The membership committee is in full swing to enlist as many members into the bureau by the December deadline as possible.

A parasitic wasp going to work in the layer house.

Royer will be examining ways that producers can avoid building failures. He will show slides of snow and wind damage from the harsh winter that affected Pennsylvania in 1994.

Gary Heim is a shareholder in the law firm of Mette, Evans and Woodside, Harrisburg. One area of emphasis of the firm is agricultural law. Heim is primarily responsible for serving the firm's agricultural clientele.

Heim received his bachelor's in economics from Elizabethtown College in 1977 and his J.D. from The Dickinson School of Law in 1980. He was reared and worked on his family's farm in Schuylkill County throughout high school and college.

Heim is a member of the Pennsylvania and his local county bar associations. He is a member of and is a past chairperson of the Agricultural Law Committee of the Pennsylvania Bar Association.

Liz Brown was raised on Sperry Farms Inc., a poultry farm which raises eggs in northwest Pennsylvania. Brown said the farm "continues to be a strong and viable non-contract operation under the leadership of the second generation, consisting of my two brothers." Brown was graduated from Penn State in 1977 and went to work for Agway Inc., in their farm planning department.

"I credit that department with extensive in-house training and am thankful for seven years of experience with Agway," said Brown. She became an agent with the IRS. She then worked for Farm Credit before becoming a self-employed accountant. Brown said she enjoys "year-round consulting with my clients, most of whom are full-time farmers."

Doug Wallick began in the insurance business in 1979. He said his career started as a "captive agent" with Agway Insurance Group. Douglas C. Wallick Insurance became an independent agency in 1984, located in Camp Hill. Wallick said his agency specializes in agricultural insurance, primarily property and casualty with additional emphasis on life, disability, and extended-care insurance programs.

old. Her first lactation record was 28,316 pounds milk, 3.6 percent, or 1,033 pounds of fat and 3.4 percent, or 976 pounds of protein.

Her five oldest daughters — all from 12 to 13 months of age — are under contract.

"She's well known overseas, she has 73 pounds protein on index," Kirby said. She has three Mountain sons, three Merrill sons, one Elvin sons, and one Bellwood son.

As far as Rosebud, during a recent flush done by Next Generation Inc., of Lancaster, 13 embryos in all were recovered, 10 of which were fertilized and six of which graded out to No.1 quality, carrying a value ranging from $1,200 to $1,500.

During a previous flush, Rosebud produced 14 embryos and nine of them were good. Horst said he will probably flush her four or five more times. Her first 365-day lactation record was 20,300 pounds of milk, 4 percent, or 1,100 pounds of fat, and 3.6 percent, or 1,000 pounds of protein.

Her dam has 3.9 protein average and the grandam had a 3.5 percent average.

Rosebud classified in May as a Very Good 87 with a Very Good mammary.

According to Bea McGrath, DVM, who has been working with Next Generation for three years, business has been growing in the field and expanding.

She said that between Dr. Allen Rushimer, owner of Next Generation, and her working part time, the business has been averaging two to three flushings per day.

Incidentally, New Generation and McGrath had been involved in the first implanting of a European dairy cattle embryo into an American recipient.

While some people have flushed cows to boost herd genetics from a specific cow family or families, the Horsts have been flushing almost purely to fill demand orders.

"It is an investment," Kirby said, Cheryl agreeing. They said that's what people have to understand when they spend what might seem like a lot of money on a specific animal.

"There's no guarantee that you'll get any eggs," Kirby said.

However, he said that with luck, enough eggs of high enough quality can be harvested and sold to pay for the expense of the flushing and to make a profit.

(Turn to Page A31)

Having just found out how many and what quality embryos he had just gotten from one of his best cows, Kirby Horst talks over the phone with an exporter to let him know what's available.

Dear Friend,

Nice for County Commissioner

I believe in...

- Local tax reform that includes tax exemptions for land still being used for farming.
- tax assessments based on land use, not on future development value.
- building the farmland preservation treasury to shorten the waiting list for farmers wanting to have their land preserved.

I ask for your vote on November 7th.

Lilia A. Nice

On Tuesday, November 7th, vote for Lilia Nice for County Commissioner.

Paid for by Nice for County Commissioner, Lloyd G Arnold, Treasurer

Marketing Genetics

And then, the embryos don't sell themselves, and the flushing businesses generally aren't in the business of marketing embryos for clients — they're busy enough flushing for all purposes.

Kirby said that they research a purchase before they make it and they follow up.

"It takes a lot of phone work," he said. "You got to let people know what you got."

Of course, it would appear that the most profit from paying for an expensive female to flush and using top-demand semen, would be to keep the embryos and resulting heifer calves.

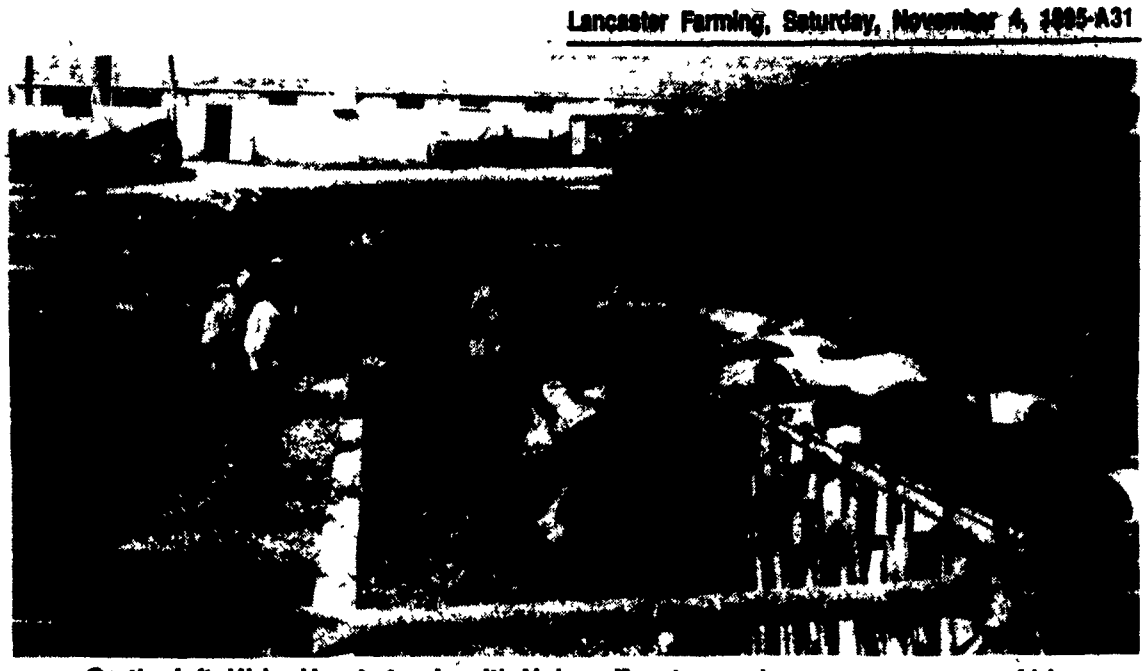
But that can also tie up much working capital and reduce immediate available cash to the point that immediate bills can't be paid easily.

On the other hand, investing the capital and selling the frozen embryos can result in a fairly quick turnaround on investment.

In addition to the purchase price of a flush-cow and semen, the veterinarian's costs for flushing, palpating, cleaning, grading and freezing embryos, there is an outlay for testing of the dam to achieve an international health certificate and other tests that different countries may require.

The expenses are real, but after the 30 days needed to get the flush cow's health tests, and then the 30 days for oversees shipping, those selling frozen embryos can expect a return on investment by as early as 60 days from time of flush.

According to Horsts, return on investment is usually within 90 days.



On the left, Kirby Horst stands with Nelson Troutman who goes over some of his heifers and cows as possible recipients of lesser quality fertilized embryos, while veterinarian Bea McGrath checks for readiness to accept an embryo.

This series of small vials contain embryos and is used to wash them in various solutions, as required by the different countries to where the embryos are to be exported.

The act of flushing is interesting, in that the womb is irrigated with sterile saline solution and the fluid aspirated into a filter. The filter resembles a small screw lid jar and has a fine mesh screen inside.

The flow of the filter drain tube is kept so that a reservior of fluid remains in the jar, so that the eggs are captured but not dried out.

Once the initial flushing procedure is completed, the filter jar containing the last of the flushing fluid and potential embryos is taken to a lab.

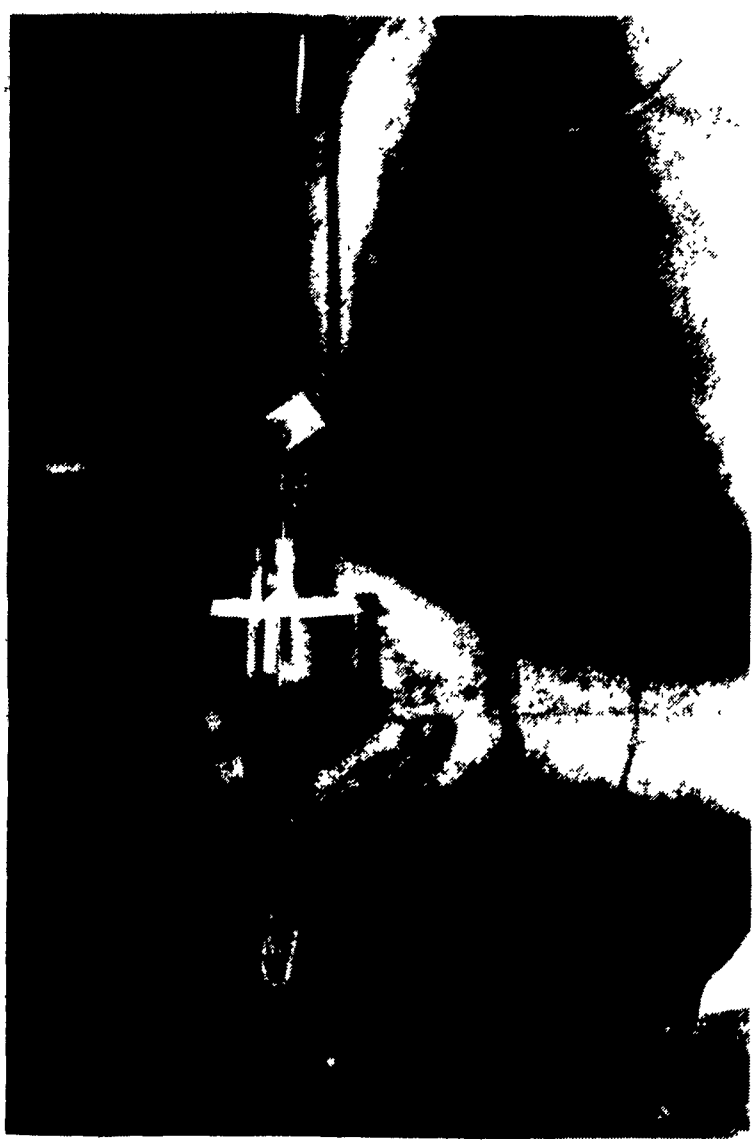
Next Generation uses a portable lab van, which was under vehicle repair the day the Horsts had flushed. Instead, Kirby allowed the use of his barn office to serve as a temporary laboratory.

The flush fluid is flushed into a petri dish then examined with a 100-power dissecting microscope.

Underneath the microscope, the technician looks for embryos. They are separated, graded, and rinsed in three different solutions: an ovum culture medium without calcium or magnesium, trypsin to clean the outside of the egg (the zona pellucida), and finally in an ovum culture medium with serum added.

(The exact number of rinsings depends on where the embryos are headed. For export, the embryos are rinsed 12 times.)

(Turn to Page A33)



A sterile saline solution flows by gravity into the uterus where eggs are flushed and captured in this filter device.

Mt. Joy Farmers Co-op Occupies New Facilities

MT. JOY (Lancaster Co.) — The 165-member Mt. Joy Farmers Cooperative on Thursday held an open house of its new facilities and offices, located just west of the borough Mt. Joy.

The cooperative had grown out of its old building, located intown Mt. Joy. With one small office room serving the old facility, the lack of proper space and difficulty with trucks maneuvering.

The old building was sold and the cooperative paid rent to continue using the office until it could move into its new facility located on five commercially zoned acres just west of town, along Rt. 230.

Actually, the cooperative purchased a 10-acre plot of land, but had it subdivided and intends to sell the adjacent five acres.

It's new facility consists of an 85-foot by 70-foot building that includes a two-truck maintenance bay with a loft over top of the office space.

Lebanon Extension Recognizes Volunteers

SCHAEFFERSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — The 78th annual meeting of the Lebanon County Penn State Cooperative Extension was held Wednesday evening at the Schaefferstown Fire Hall, with Enos Heisey presiding.

The purpose of the annual banquet is to review the past year's programs, make recognitions of outstanding work by paid employees and volunteers, elect directors to the board, and to share fellowship.

Reports were given by Michelle Rodgers, assistant to the Southeast Region director, who presented Martha Gregory with a 10-year service award, and Winifred McGee with a five-year service award.

Alletta Schadler, county extension director, gave a report on the activities and hours logged by the extension staff and volunteers, while Galen Kopp, county livestock and dairy agent presented a video-tape about urban sprawl and the challenges.

Martha Gregory, who serves as county 4-H coordinator, recognized 4-H volunteers for years of service.

Recognized for five years service were Dale Bushong of Annville, with the North Mountain 4-H Club, and Kathy Martin, of Lebanon, for work with the NoSoAnn Dairy Club.

Ten year recognitions was given to Robert McMillen, of Lebanon, for work with the NoSoAnn Dairy Club.

Recognized for 15 years of service were Betsy Arnold, Cornwall, with the Happy Variety 4-H Club, and Lorraine Royer, of Lebanon, with the North Mountain 4-H Club.

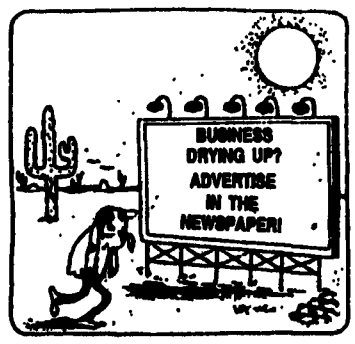
During the evening, special recognition was given to Harold Bollinger, of Kleinfeltersville, for his more than 30 years service as a member of the county extension board of directors. A retired farmer, Bollinger has been active in his community for many years and continues to be involved.

In election results, Lloyd Early, of Lebanon, Lydia Flores, Lebanon, Duane Nolt, Richland, Terri Hill Shuey, and Richard Smith, were elected to serve a two-year term on the board.

Five were elected and five additional directors are to be appointed by the board.

Extension bylaws were revised two years ago to include term limits for directors. They are now limited to serving three terms of two years, or six years.

Leaving the board are Enos Heisey, Amos Balsbaugh, Linda Boyer, Harold Bollinger, Alvena Kneasel, Sara Jane Krall, Gerald Long, Dorothy Moyer, Robert Smith, and Carol Ungemach.



Marketing Genetics

The entire flushing operation is a timed event from the time they are recovered from the donor cow or heifer.

In order to maintain good embryo viability, it is imperative that those embryos intended to be frozen need to be discovered, graded, washed, isolated, pipetted into straws, and frozen with liquid nitrogen within four hours.

The quicker the better for viability.

If the eggs are to be transferred to recipients in the herd, then time isn't as critical a factor.

Each embryo is numbered and paperwork is generated for each embryo. Each embryo straw is labeled with the donor number and registration number, the date frozen, and the embryo transfer code. The straws are put into a larger straw called a cane, that carries the cane code and information about each embryo with references to the paperwork.

The effect of flushing on the cow isn't hard. She is cleaned and the area around the vulva is shaved and disinfected. She is given a spinal block to keep her comfortable while the procedure is being done.

A healthy cow or heifer can be flushed as frequently as every six weeks. If it's the right kind of cow, there could be some profit in flushing that frequently.

The Horsts' 49-head registered Holstein herd has a BAA of 108.4, and is considered a high type herd.

While most dairy farmers divide their herd according to production groups for feeding, which is a good practice, the Horsts also divide the herd into groups for breeding purposes.

But according to Kirby, he and Cheryl really have three breeding programs — one for Red and White Holsteins, another stressing deep pedigree, and one that stressed index for selling bulls and embryos.

The milk sales help the overall farm cash flow, and the herd averages more 21,000 pounds of milk.

Kirby's parents bought the farm in 1959 and Kirby and Cheryl started dairying on their own in 1981. His father had a dispersal and Kirby and Cheryl bought 14 animals at that sale. Kirby had also bought a few cattle through 4-H so they started with 40, and they said they don't plan any large herd expansions.

For the Horsts, expanding their business efforts on marketing genetics, and approaching the business with the necessary effort, is what has really allowed them to progress with their business and better support their family.

U. of Pa. Holds New Bolton Open House

pigs, turkeys, chickens, and emus were on display. They represented patients treated regularly at New Bolton Center's Widener Hospital. There were two locations of continuous video film depicting stories, research, and information about the entire veterinary school.

The crowd received information on The Pennsylvania Agriculture Department Laboratory System (PADLS). Visitors crowded around Dr. Poppenga's poisonous plant exhibit, where they could see common plants found in the home, garden, and field that are hazardous to a variety of small and large animals.

Habecker opened the post mortem room that was continuously crowded between the hours of 10 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Representative Joe Pitts, a staunch supporter of the school and especially New Bolton Center, toured the facility with Dean Alan Kelly. Representative Pitts said, "I will continue to support New Bolton Center and its invaluable service to agriculture and the commonwealth. It's wonderful what you are doing here."

To the delight of the crowds, several live demonstrations with animals performed at regular intervals throughout the day. Rovenolt Stables brought their six-horse hitch composed of black Percheron draft horses each weighing in at about 2,000 pounds. The "Stop, Paws and Run K'9's" (S.P.A.R.K.S.), a subdivision of the Dog Training Club of Chester County, ran dog agility and obedience performances with a variety of dog breeds.

The small animal hospital (VHUP) located at the center city campus was also in attendance with various displays. VHUP contributed information and exhibits ranging from dog behavior problems to emergency service care for canine and feline patients.

The VHUP Blood Mobile, which travels to nearby communities to collect blood from volunteer canines, the New Bolton Center horse ambulance, and a field service truck were available for the public to inspect. A tent designated for information on admission to the veterinary school and Harcum College's Certified Animal Health Practitioner program proved to be a popular spot.

All ages stopped by for information about the animal health care professions. More than 100 doctors, nurses, residents, interns, students, employees and volunteers from Penn's veterinary school worked throughout the day to make the open house a success.

If you want to attend the Open House in 1996, call (610) 444-5800, ext. 2182 for more information.

State Representative Joseph R. Pitts commends Lucy the cow on doing a great job.

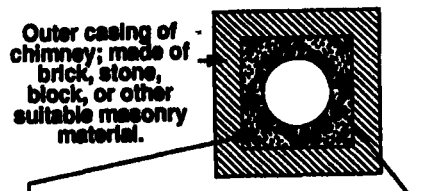
ADVANCED CHIMNEY TECHNOLOGY

A SURE SOLUTION TO MASONRY CHIMNEY PROBLEMS:

SAFER: CHIMTEK is designed to withstand severe chimney fires without breaking or transmitting high temperatures to adjoining combustible materials.

LESS CREOSOTE: Wood smoke contains moisture (H_2O). When the smoke comes into contact with a surface under approx. 250 degrees F the water will condense to a liquid. This liquid combined with other products in wood smoke will result in creosote. Creosote can be very dangerous when it ignites. The inside of a CHIMTEK chimney stays much warmer and greatly reduces the amount of creosote formation. In many cases CHIMTEK chimneys are completely clean after years of use.

IMPROVES STOVE PERFORMANCE: The draft produced by a chimney is what pulls oxygen into the fire for combustion. The three main factors affecting draft are the chimney's height, size and temperature. CHIMTEK contains a great amount of a very special insulating material that is not affected by moisture saturation and will not seattle or deteriorate. Poor draft will result in poor combusion. Poor combusion will create more smoke. Smoke is wasted fuel. Newere EPA certified stoves are especially dependent on proper draft to perform properly.



CHIMTEK INNER LINER:
- Made of volcanic pumice and high-temperature refractory cements.
- Round shape provides even temperatures inside flue, and contributes to efficient flow of smoke and flue gases.
- Highly resistant to thermal shock.
- Even if cracks should occur, the round shape and Chimtek Secondary Liner prevent pieces from falling into chimney.
- The volcanic pumice in Chimtek liners adds considerable insulating value.

CHIMTEK SECONDARY LINER:
- Provides exceptional insulation to make chimney more efficient and reduce heat transfer to combustible materials.
- Provides structural support for inner liner.
- Will not absorb moisture or creosote.

Farm-City Exchangees Share Experiences At Berks Banquet

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

READING (Berks Co.) — To a dairyman who participated in the recent Berks farm-city exchange program, it was amazing to see how different — and yet similar — entirely different businesses can be.

While farmers are used to performing chores in one half hour or hour increments, in the world of TV journalism, according to dairyman William Lesher, time is measured in the seconds or even half seconds.

During the farm-city exchange day this year, Lesher, who along with wife Lolly and family operate Way-Har Dairy Farms in Strausstown, exchanged responsibilities on the farm with Robyn Young, reporter for TV-69, Berks Edition.

Lesher and Young spoke on Thursday night to about 365 who attended the 12th Annual Berks County Farm-City Banquet at The Riveredge Restaurant in Reading.

Lesher indicated he was impressed by the technology available to assemble and broadcast television news. He spoke about some of the stress reporters have to endure as deadline nears, and about how a news segment has to be edited for a precise time period. He said his trip to the TV news station showed some of the challenges faced by the "country boy who goes to the big city."

Lesher manages Way-Har Farms, which consists of 120 milk cows, 450 acres of cropland, and a retail store. Milk is processed and sold in the store and to retail outlets. Ice cream and bulk foods are the mainstay of the business.

Young praised the work of the county's farmers, who she said are the "backbone of this country." She said she remained very patient in her attempts to milk the cows.

Carl Brown, of F.M. Brown's Sons, Inc., exchanged places for a day with Carl Herbein, managing partner of Herbein and Company, a Reading CPA firm. Brown said that at the CPA, "computers are used to the utmost" to set up schedules for the accountants and for electronic mail.

Herbein said that he was impressed by the automation of feed facilities compared to what he remembered as a child.

At the banquet, Ted Bowers, assistant vice president in the agrifinance department at CoreStates Hamilton Bank, presented two Public Relations in Agriculture awards. One was presented to Rep. Sheila Miller, a "true friend a promoter of agriculture for many years," said Bowers. Miller serves as a state representative in the Pa. House-129th district in western and northern Berks County. Miller served as a former editor of Lancaster Farming and as executive director of the state Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee.

Bowers also presented an award to the Berks County Farm Bureau, with a membership of 1,590. The award was accepted by Edward Hartman, president, and Gertrude Moore, secretary/treasurer of the bureau.

During the farm-city exchange day this year, William Lesher, far left, exchanged responsibilities on the job with Robyn Young, reporter for TV-69, Berks Edition, second from left. Carl Brown, of F.M. Brown's Sons, Inc., far right, exchanged places for a day with Carl Herbein, managing partner of Herbein and Company, a Reading CPA firm, second from right.

Chamber Sets Ag Banquet

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry is holding its 19th annual Agriculture-Industry Banquet on Tuesday, Nov. 21 at the Lancaster Host Resort.

Dr. David M. Kohl, professor of agriculture finance and small business and entrepreneurship at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, will present the keynote address entitled "The A-B-C's of Managing Changes in Agriculture."

As an active educator, Kohl has provided insights into financial management and the future of agriculture in more than 1,200 workshops all over the country. He has published four books and more than 125 articles on financial and business-related topics.

Kohl was one of the leaders in establishing guidelines for the standardized reporting and analysis of agricultural producers' financial information on a national basis.

Also featured at the banquet is Charles C. Brosius, Pennsylvania secretary of agriculture, who will present the county's Century Farm awards. Farms that have been in the same family for more than 100 years are eligible for application. The recipient of the George C. Delp Award for outstanding individual contribution to agriculture will be announced as well.

Carroll County Farm Bureau Meets

JOANNE E. MORVAY
Maryland Correspondent

WESTMINSTER, Md. — The Carroll County Farm Bureau elected a new president and vice president at the group's recent meeting.

More than 300 people attended the annual banquet at the Pleasant Valley Fire Hall.

Outgoing president Robert Logue thanked Farm Bureau members for their support during his term. Logue also offered some words of wisdom to the elected officials in the audience, urging them to spend some time "down on the farm."

"Maybe if you lived on a farmer's income you'd spend our tax dollars a little more wisely," Logue said, to great applause.

Glenn Shirley of Westminster is the Carroll group's new president. Shirley previously served as the Carroll Farm Bureau's Young Farmer chairman, discussion group chairman, and legislative chairman/vice president. He was also a district director.

Shirley urged members to think seriously about the legislative resolutions the group adopted and urged them to offer opinions and support to the directors as Farm Bureau works to make agriculture's voice heard in Carroll County.

This year's county resolutions included a vote to urge Carroll's commissioners to keep a farmer on the county's Planning and Zoning Commission. The role of the commission has become increasingly important as Carroll has — and continues to — develop. Dennis Bowman, the Union Bridge dairy farmer who chaired the commission, was not reappointed when his term expired this fall. Though there are some commission members who profess to support agriculture, there are no full-time or part-time farmers serving on the commission at present.

In other election duties, Rauland Roop of New Windsor was elected vice president. New district directors are Richard Pool and Wayne Drabic, both of Westminster, Arthur Stocksdale, Jr. of Hampstead, Robert Clarke of Sykesville and Bruce Hoff of Uniontown. Dick Weaver, George Rill, Glenn Rash, Ralph Baumgardner and Robert Warner went off the board and were thanked for their service.

Louise Fisher, Marsha Smith and Mary Drabic were publicly recognized for their service to the Farm Bureau Women's Committee. Brenda Derr is the committee's newest director.

Gold Star achievement awards were presented to Glenn Shirley for public affairs/discussion group, Dick Weaver for national affairs, Jean Knill as information director, Denise Sprinkle for Young Farmer's activities, Sharon Fritz as leader of the women's committee, and Ernie Martin for service to members.

office space. It all totals about 1,000 square feet for office and business, and about 900 square feet for vehicle use.

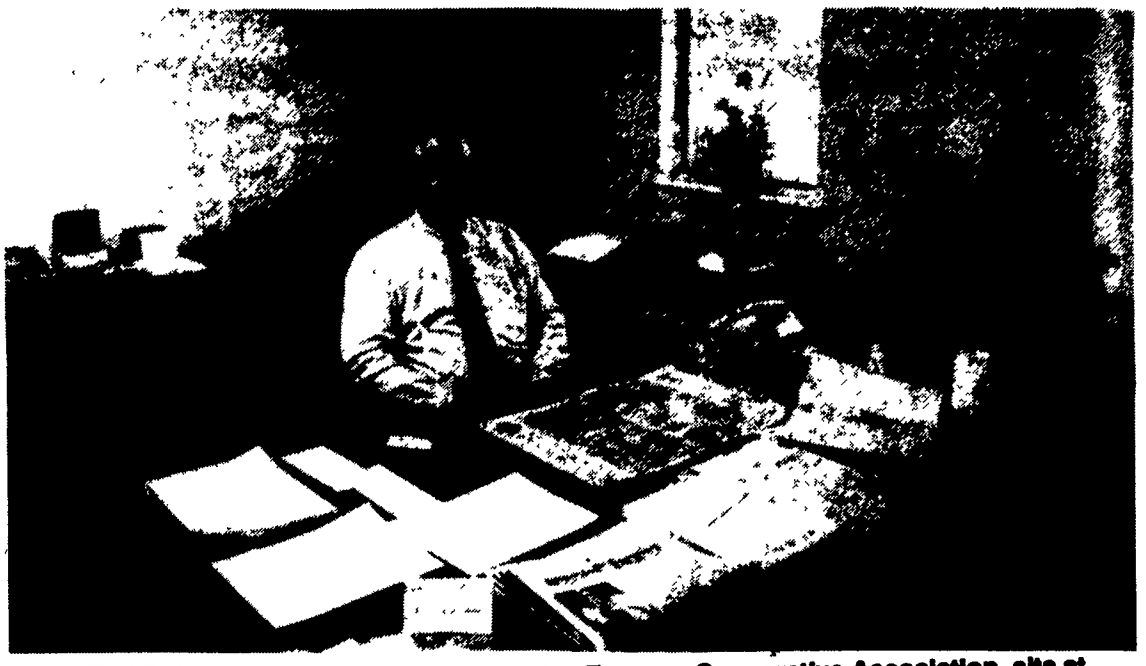
The building and site cost about $390,000, according to Dave Dum, chairman of the building committee.

Though the cooperative officially moved into the facility in mid-September, the open house was held after most of the initial settling in has been done.

The cooperative ships more than 160 million pounds of milk per year and has estimated 1995 operating costs of 66 cents per hundred pounds milk. The average member net pay per hundredweight for September was $12.60.

The cooperative currently markets its milk through API, and more directly works with Atlantic Dairy Cooperative.

Paul Hostetter, retired manager of the Mount Joy Farmers Cooperative Association, sits next to an office worker's desk and talks to members and visitors during the co-op's open house of its new facilities.



Earl Dehmey, manager of the Mount Joy Farmers Cooperative Association, sits at his desk in the new manager's office.

Lancaster Farm Women Install New President

At Home With Kathryn Fry

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Twenty years ago Kathryn Fry joined the Society of Farm Women. Today she assumes the presidency of the Lancaster County Society with its 720 members in 28 societies.

Kathryn typlifies the qualities upheld by the society that was founded in 1914. Members seek to foster a love for the farm and family and to enhance the charm of a real country home.

The century farmhouse of Kathryn and her husband Albert permeates the warmth and atmosphere of a home where love flourishes.

The Frys' two sons are now married, but the oldest son Lowell lives on adjoining land and farms in partnership with his dad.

The farmhouse and gabled stone barn, called the Half-Moon barn, were built in 1868. Lowell is the sixth generation to farm the land that was passed down through Albert's mother's family.

Albert and Kathryn married in February 1961 after a snowstorm postponed their wedding a few days. Albert's parents built a house on the land so that the newlyweds could move into the farmhouse.

Albert told his bride that he didn't marry her to work in the barn, but she may if she wanted to. Kathryn did.

Kathryn, who was a nurse, quickly adapted to milking cows and farm work.

"I found my nurses' training benefitted in caring for the cows and calves. They are just like people — each has it's own personality," Kathryn said.

She was thrilled that at the first field day that she attended, she won a prize in cow judging.

When the boys were growing up, Kathryn stopped working as a nurse but continued working on the farm. She assisted in Red Cross training and gave injections to several people who needed them on a daily basis.

When her friends discussed the possibility of beginning Farm Women Society 27, Kathryn was interested but illness kept her from attending the first meeting. Interest was so great that membership was closed.

"Later, when there was an opening, I was asked to join," Kathryn said.

"It's such a great organization. Everyone shares a common interest and they are such lovely people."

Kathryn held offices in her society and then served terms as first and second vice president. Becoming president of the society is a natural progression.

In her term as president, Kathryn said, "We may need to look at some changes to fit into the '90s that will be more encouraging for others to join. Meeting times and responsibilities may need to be more flexible. Just because something is always done a certain way doesn't mean it needs to continue.

"In the past, farm women members came from the farm, but today anyone interested in country life will find Farm Women beneficial."

While many groups are having difficulty recruiting young mothers, Kathryn's enthusiasm for the Farm Women Society has influenced both her daughter-in-laws and some of their friends to join.

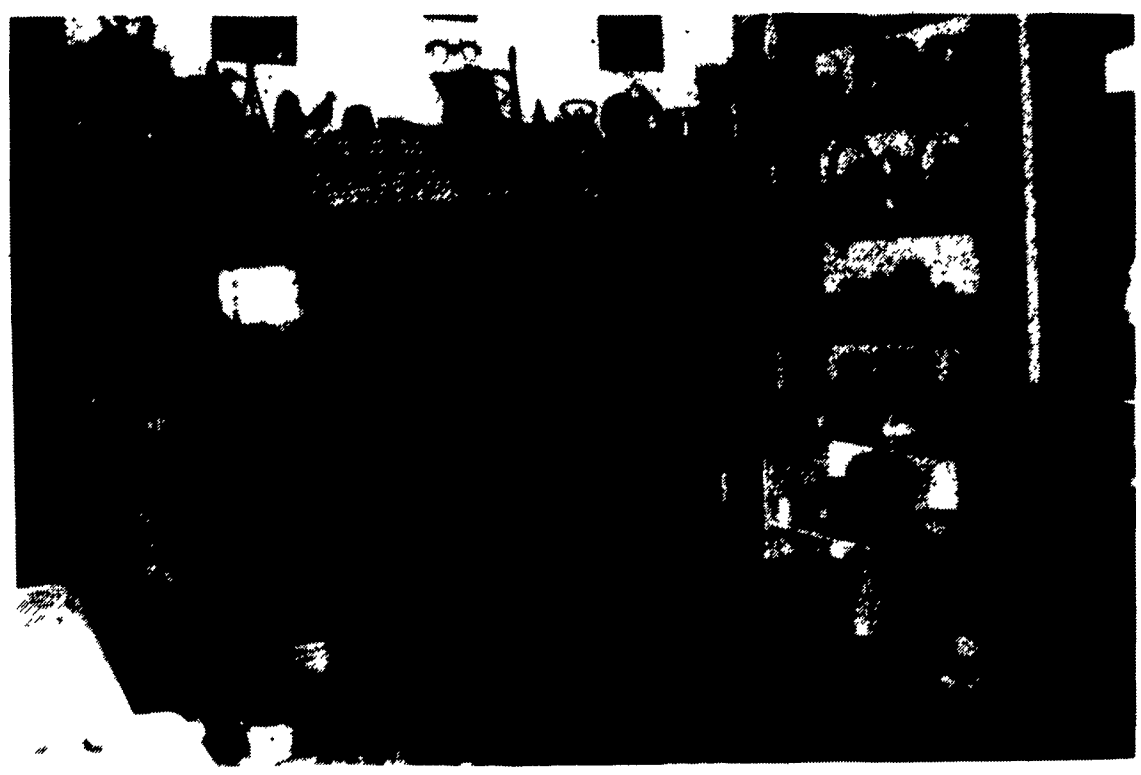
"I always like to try new things," Kathryn said of her many talents that have been developed through self teaching and friends who share. Knitting, decoupaging, flower arranging, crewel embroidery, baking, and trying new recipes are a few of her favorite things. She makes her own clothes and sewed all the curtains and draperies for her many-windowed farm house.

The farmhouse is filled with family heirlooms and antiques collected by both she and her husband.

It's impossible to tell where Kathryn's decorating touches

(Turn to Page B4)

President of Lancaster County Society of Farm Women Kathryn Fry stands in front of the 1868 farmhouse that has been in her husband's family for six generations.



The spacious laundry room was formerly the summer kitchen. The walk-in fireplace is a perfect spot to display collectibles.

Kathryn examines a child's antique tea set.

The tin cookie cutter collection is Kathryn's husband Albert's. The couple share a love for antiques and preserving the past.

begin and end because her husband is also a talented flower arranger and enjoys collecting antiques and placing them at the right spots. He also refinishes furniture and landscapes with prolific flowers and plants.

Kathryn has been a 4-H leader for about 10 years. She taught sewing and cake decorating classes.

"I always wanted to be in 4-H as a kid but there weren't any clubs in my area except animals," she said.

Music is a big part of the couple's lives. For 25 years, Kathryn sang in a sextet and her husband sang in a quartet. Both play the piano. And Kathryn has directed several choirs over the years. She also is a Sunday school teacher for high school girls and she and her husband have served as youth advisers over the years.

"So many are afraid of teen-age years. But I think it's a gorgeous age," she said.

The Frys are now shepherd leaders at Congregational Bible Church.

After the children were grown, Kathryn began working as a nurse at Landis Homes, a retirement community.

"Geriatric nursing is an exciting and busy challenge. I think people in their golden years need to be kept comfortable and every effort should be made to make these years the happiest time of their lives," Kathryn said.

When their oldest son wanted to farm in partnership, they thoroughly considered expanding the farming operation so that two families could survive financially on it. After considerable debate, they decided not to expand the farm but to keep it as a family farm. Gradually the Frys sold their cows as they freshened and concentrated on crop farming.

Lowell pursued a degree in business and finance, but farming was still in his blood. He now works as an ag lender for a local bank and crop farms the Frys' 80 acres. During the transition, Albert took an off-farm job. Another son, Loren, his wife and grandson live nearby.

While her involvement is multifaceted, Kathryn continues to find the most fulfilment in family and home. Her purpose, like those stated by the Society of Farm Women, is to contribute to the power and influence of the farm home, to contribute to the community activity of farm women, and to develop leadership and promote better living and working conditions in the farm homes of Pennsylvania.

In the dining room, one china closet holds a bone china tea cup collection, another the 1700's to 1800's printed ironstone collection, and another a mixture of antique dishes and glassware.

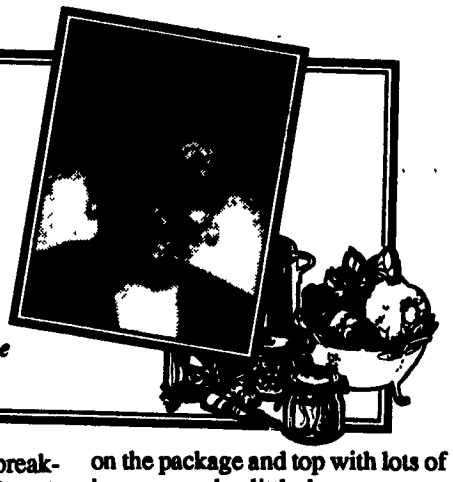
Consuming Thoughts

by

Fay Strickler

Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.



Hey Mom, what's for breakfast? If your family doesn't ask this question any more, perhaps it's because the breakfast foods are basically the same day after day. If you've gotten into a routine and want to try something new and different, think about some bulgur for breakfast. Believe it or not, oatmeal is not the only hot cereal to be had on a chilly fall morning. Instead of your standard favorites, try nutritious hot cereals that are deliciously different. Here are just a few examples to get you started.

Bulgur—Bulgur is a delicious whole-grain with a light, nutty flavor. Because it is pre-cooked, it only takes a few minutes to prepare—follow the package instructions. Then smother it with strawberries, slip in a bit of honey and enjoy.

Couscous—This middle-eastern grain is a snap to prepare: just add to boiling water, remove from heat and let the covered pot sit for 15 minutes. Toss in some dried raisins, apricots and a few almond slivers for a real taste treat.

Kasha (Roasted Buckwheat)—Kasha has a nuttier, fuller flavor than regular buckwheat. Follow the cooking instructions on the package and top with lots of bananas and a little brown sugar.

Barley—This is a mild grain with a slightly chewy texture. "Pearl" (refined) barley is the type found in most stores, although there are whole-grain varieties available. You can also try "quick cooking" barley (ready in 10 minutes) or barley flakes. Prepare according to package instructions and enjoy with a bit of maple syrup and cinnamon.

Cracke Rye—Whole rye kernels have a distinctive, robust flavor. Follow the cooking instructions on the package and top with a generous dollop of fruit preserves.

Wheat Berries—These nutty-tasting, whole-wheat kernels have a crunck/chewy texture. Prepare according to package instructions (hint: soaking overnight cuts the cooking time in half) and serve up with a little brown sugar and skim milk.

Hot "Cold" Cereals—Shredder wheat and grape nuts-type cereals are traditionally eaten cold, but milk and a few seconds in the microwave turns them into a hot treat. Add plenty of fresh berries or other fruit.

Muffins make a nutritious part of a nay breakfast. Unfortunatley, it's hard to find a store-bought muffin that's low in fat, nutritious and tastes good.

If you do try store-bought varieties, check labels for those lowest in fat. But why bother, when it's so simple to make delicious, nutritious changes to your own recipes? Take a look at the suggestions below, then make two batches of your favorite recipe and seal one in a freezer container. You can now enjoy healthful muffins for up to two months!

•Substitute one half of the all-purpose flour called for in a recipe with whole wheat flour or rolled oats; or substitute on fourth of it with bran. You will increase vitamins, minerals and fiber. And once you become accustomed to the heartier flavor and texture, you may want to use an even larger proportion of whole wheat flour.

•The use of eggs adds very little cholesterol to muffins (only about 25 milligrams per muffin). However, if this is still a concern, you may use two egg whites or an egg substitute for each egg needed.

•Try skim milk instead of whole milk—you'll cut down on fat.

•Replace the oil in a recipe with any of the following ingredients: applesauce; baby food fruits; or a mixture of one cup dried figs or dates pureed with three-fourths cup water and one teaspoon vanilla.

•Add grated vegetables like zucchini or carrots, or fruits like apples, raisins, bananas, blackberries, strawberries, cranberries or peaches (one-half to one cup).

•Spice things up with nutmeg, cinnamon, orange peel, allspice or lemon rind (1 to 1½ teaspoons).

•Lowfat spreads include jellies, jams, preserves or fruit "butters" like apple and pumpkin.

Farm Women Societies

Lancaster Society 14

Twenty-two persons from Farm Women Society No. 14 enjoyed a delicious buffet dinner and the play "Beau Jest" at the Rainbow Dinner Theatre at Paradise for the October meeting.

The September meeting was an auction with Ellen Newswanger as auctioneer at the home of Dorothy Musser on Wheatland School Road.

The next meeting will be on November 8 at the home of Edna Groff on North Star Road. Marian Leaman, who has been to Lithuania, will be the speaker. Members will also be bringing non-perishable food to be given to the needy.

Berks Society 1

Nineteen members of Berks County Society of Farm Women Group 1 met at the Covered Bridge Hotel, Oley, for an October dinner meeting. Members were pleased to greet guest Mary Jane Holloway.

It was noted that Amy Woodell of Hummelstown, a granddaughter of member Agnes Noll, wrote a winning essay in a contest sponsored by the Society of Farm Women of Pennsylvania. The essay was read at the Berks County Society of Farm Women Convention, which was held October 7, at Berks County Agricultural Center, Leesport.

A Longaberger basket demonstration will be a special feature at the November 8 meeting to be held at 7:30 p.m. at the Oley home of Lillian Hetrick.

In 1989, Sherry Bashore went to Australia through FFA's Work Experience Abroad Program. She lived and worked on a dairy farm for three months.

In addition to exchanging farming ideas and techniques, Sherry also exchanged recipes.

Her host family, Roy and Elva Dality and sons, taught her "Aussie" cooking in exchange for some old-fashioned Pennsylvania Dutch cooking.

One of these was Pavlova, which is actually created in honor of the famous Russian ballerina Anna Pavlova.

Sherry lives with her husband Bob and 2-year-old daughter Royell in Annville. Bob works for Harper-Dell Farms and Sherry does relief milking.

Here is the recipe.

AUSTRALIAN BICENTENARY PAVLOVA

6 egg whites
1½ cups granulated sugar
2 teaspoons vinegar
2 teaspoons warm water
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon warm water, extra
1¼ cups cream, whipped
4 Kiwi fruit
2 mangoes, peaches or other yellow-colored fruit
Lime glaze for decoration

Whip egg whites in clean, dry bowl until stiff, gradually beat in sugar (mixture should be glossy and hold its shape. Beat in vinegar, water, and vanilla, fold in extra water, spoon into springform pan lined with parchment paper. Bake in the lower half of gas oven at 200 degrees for 7 minutes. Reduce heat to 150 degrees for another 1¼ -1½ hours.

Cool, release from springform pan. Serve pavlova on base plate or carefully lift from the paper and serve on a platter. Spread top of pavlova with cream. Arrange alternating slices of green and yellow fruit on top. Carefully pour lime glaze on top.

Lime Glaze

3 teaspoons arrowroot
½ cup water
½ cup sugar
¼ cup lime juice

Blend arrowroot with water in small saucepan. Add sugar and lime juice. Stir over medium heat until glaze boils and thickens. Remove from heat and cool before use.

Banana Butter

4 cups mashed bananas
½ cup fresh lemon juice
1 teaspoon Ever-Fresh Fruit Protector
6 cups sugar
1 box Sure-Jell
½ teaspoon butter

Mash bananas thoroughly. Measure 4 cups into a 6- or 8-quart saucepan. Stir in lemon juice, fruit protector, and sugar. Add butter, bring to a full rolling boil on high heat, stirring constantly.

Quickly stir in all sugar. Return to full rolling boil and boil exactly one minute stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Skim off foam. Ladle quickly into prepared jars. Seal with two-piece lids.

This is good with peanut butter. Add a spoonful to blender when making milk shapes. Use as topping on ice cream.

Li'l Miss Holds Job In Berks County

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

FLEETWOOD (Berks Co.) — Maggie Heller bubbles with energy and enthusiasm. Recently she was selected as the Berks County Li'l Miss Dairy Princess.

In her role as the Li'l Miss, Maggie accompanies Berks County Dairy Princess Jen Davis to schools, malls, and meetings to encourage people to use real dairy products.

Usually the girl who is selected as a Li'l Miss is from a dairy farm. But Maggie doesn't live on the farm.

"My daddy drives a Clover Farm Truck. He gets milk and takes it to the stores," Maggie said.

Maggie lives with her parents, Sandra and Keith, in Fleetwood. She has two brothers, Patrick, 6, and Aaron, 8.

Patrick is a special brother because he is Maggie's twin. Together, the twins have lots of fun, although sometimes, they like to do things differently.

Maggie doesn't seem to ever be quiet and still. She said."I like to swim, eat pizza, sing, pretend to be a ballerina, dance a lot, jump rope a lot, and do crafts."

She added, "I like school a lot, especially math and English. I do everything (lessons) ahead."

Without pausing, Maggie added, "I also like to kiss and hug, dance, and ride bike — our whole family rides bike."

Recently, Maggie dramatically related how she was selected from six contestants to assist the Berks County Dairy Princess in dairy promotion. The 6-year-old said that after the Li'l Miss contestants were introduced to the audience at the dairy princess pageant, she went off stage and sat with her family.

"Then the judges came back. Someone gave an evelope and when she opened it, she said, 'Maggie Heller.'

"That was me! I couldn't believe it. I wanted someone else to win," Maggie said as she described the moment.

"I got a banner, a crown, and four prizes," Maggie said.

The prizes were a book, chalk, a pewter plate, and a bracelet and necklace set.

For promotions, Maggie wears her crown and banner. At meetings, Maggie often recites a poem that her mother made up. It goes like this:

Your Holstein gives the milk,
Hi Ho the dairy-O.
Milk goes into your tank,
Hi Ho the dairy-O.
The driver takes the milk,
Hi Ho the dairy-O.
The truck goes to the dairy,
Hi Ho the dairy-O.
My daddy drives a truck,
Hi Ho the dairy-O.
He takes the milk to the store,
Hi Ho the dairy-O.
The mommies buy the milk,
Hi Ho the dairy-O.
The kids drink the milk,
Hi Ho the dairy-O.
They get strong bones and teeth,
Hi Ho the dairy-O.
They get strong bones and teeth.

When Maggie does milk promotions, she doesn't always need to speak. Sometimes she rides on trucks in parades and waves to the crowd. At the Reading Phillies baseball game, Maggie handed out ice cream coupons to the crowd.

Maggie and her twin brother, Patrick, and brother Aaron drink lots of milk and look for the real seal on dairy products.

Since becoming the Li'l Miss, Maggie has visited the farm a few times to see how a real farm operates.

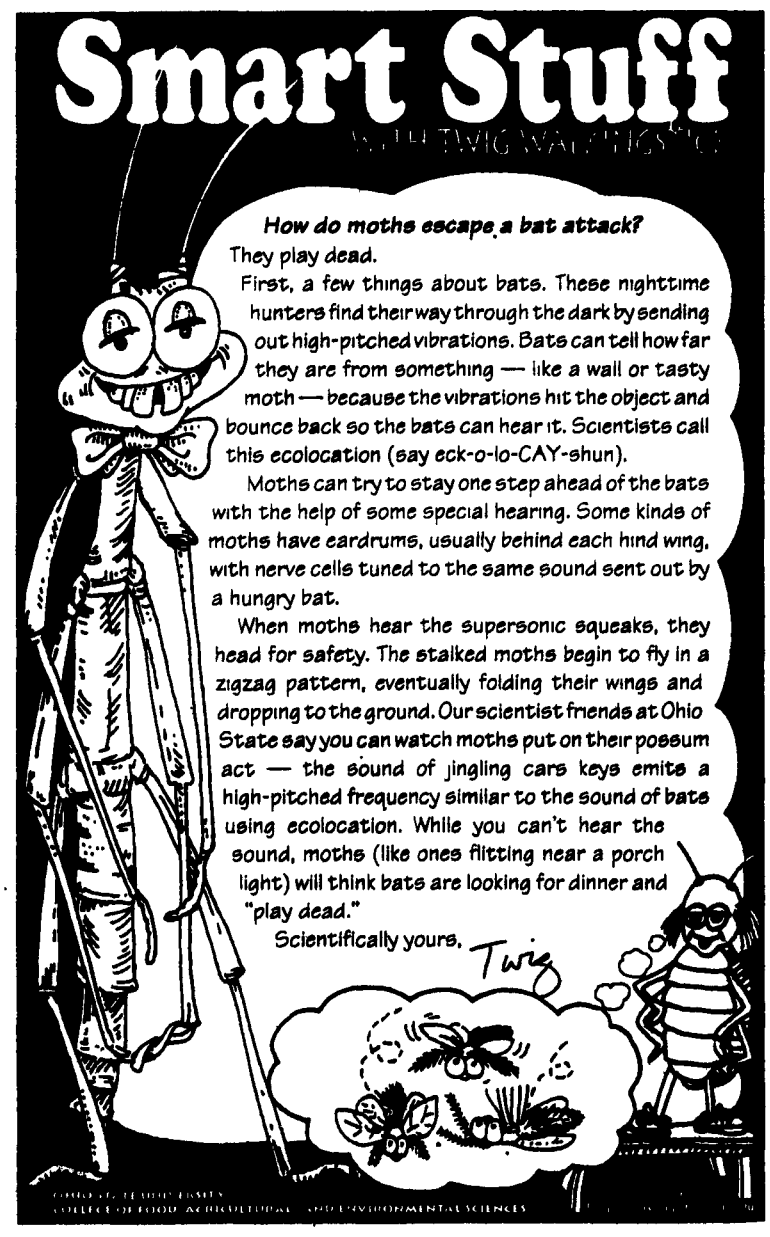
"I'd like to grow up to be a real dairy princess and a farmer," she said.

Her brother Aaron, 8, is thinking about becoming a dairy ambassador.

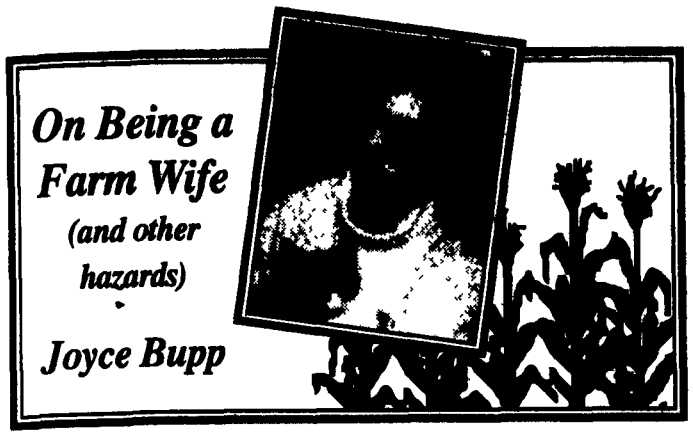
While her daddy drives a milk truck, Maggie poses with her mom Sandra and brother Aaron, 8, and twin Patrick, 6.

Berks County Li'l Miss Dairy Princess Maggie Heller likes to dance with her twin brother Patrick.

The Heller siblings spent many hours playing soccer in their back yard.



Smart Stuff
How do moths escape a bat attack?
They play dead.
First, a few things about bats. These nighttime hunters find their way through the dark by sending out high-pitched vibrations. Bats can tell how far they are from something — like a wall or tasty moth — because the vibrations hit the object and bounce back so the bats can hear it. Scientists call this ecolocation (say eck-o-lo-CAY-shun).
Moths can try to stay one step ahead of the bats with the help of some special hearing. Some kinds of moths have eardrums, usually behind each hind wing, with nerve cells tuned to the same sound sent out by a hungry bat.
When moths hear the supersonic squeaks, they head for safety. The stalked moths begin to fly in a zigzag pattern, eventually folding their wings and dropping to the ground. Our scientist friends at Ohio State say you can watch moths put on their possum act — the sound of jingling cars keys emits a high-pitched frequency similar to the sound of bats using ecolocation. While you can't hear the sound, moths (like ones flitting near a porch light) will think bats are looking for dinner and "play dead."
Scientifically yours,
Twig



I won the skirmish again last night.

But I'm going to lose the battle. Eventually.

This is the fight we endure every year. Actually, it's sort of the D-Day of the season. And no matter how valiantly we stand our ground, the end will be predictable. And inevitable.

The War of the Garden will soon end.

We dug the trenches and foxholes months ago. Into them went seeds and seedlings, bulbs, rhizones and corms. We plowed and tilled, took aim with fertilizer, lime and manure. We erected tents in early spring as shelters against the enemy fire of chilly April nights. We watered and weeded and did hand-to-hand combat with rakes and hoes. We fought with plastic and laid down mulch. And weeded some more.

The enemy brought in its big guns. Groundhogs. We stuffed fuel-soaked rags down their trenched burrows and shot giant rocks against the openings. Valiant battlers they were, who turned tail and exited distant, hidden openings to return in guerilla raids on August nights in the late stringbean plantings.

For several months, it looked like we were winning. We reaped the spoils of the struggle despite too much rain, too little rain, too much humidity, too many bad bugs, too few good bugs, guineas taking dust baths in the middle of the battlefield and heifers with a penchant for exploring untried territories.

Strawberries and asparagus, peas and beans, peppers, tomatoes and corn. We pillaged and plundered vines and stalks, taking what was ripe in its own season.

With victory in strking distance, fresh batallions of squash bugs hatched out, thrived in heatstroke conditions and zapped every vining crop in sight, just as the fruites ripened to near maturity. Even our organic-barbed-wire against bus, the marigolds scattered among the melons, failed to deter the waves of kamikaze insect attackers.

Whipped in the melon patch, we retreated to the unbugged safety of the jalepeno peppers. Jalepeno peppers are a garden land-mine to bugs.

And made our final stand in the tomato patch.

Not bugs, but weather, is the ultimate adversity of tomatoes. Ours thrived and grew thick in the heavy rainfall of early summer, set abundant blossoms and brought forth bushels of delicious, healthful yields in the baking heat and humidity that followed.

But now, the enemy is at hand.

After milking and feeding calves in recent evenings, this foot soldier plods through the chilling dark and damp grasses of the back yard to erect our final defense. Flimsy and white ("What IS that white stuff?," asks the Farmer II), the floating row covers offer but a temporary truce in these waning days of war.

Already, several light frosts have gunned down tender plants not tucked beneath the lightweight field tents. Which means those few lingering orange-shaded tomatoes on the front lines are snatched like precious jewels and hauled to safety on the basement porch.

And, sadly, as in any war, some won't make it, rotting before they ripen. Which makes the survivors taste even more delicious.

So all you gardening kindred spirits, please join me in one last final attack in defense of our annuals. Ready, with a rotten tomate in hand,..aim, at the chilly, gray clouds bringing approaching 20-degree temperatures...and fire! at the unseeen enemy of Winter.

It won't change a thing. But we'll feel better about it.

4-H After-School Program Receives Grant

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)—More Philadelphia inner-city youngsters will have an opportunity to participate in Penn State Cooperative Extension's 4-H Program—thanks to a $1 million grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Philadelphia is one of four cities to share a $3.5 million HUD grant for expansion of the 4-H After School Program, which was created to bring the fundamentals of 4-H to young people ages 7 to 13, who live in public housing communities.

Philadelphia, Kansas City, and Oakland each will receive $1 million, while Los Angeles, where the program was established in 1988 as one of the first collaborative programs ever involving 4-H, corporations and communities with inner city and urban school children, will receive $500,000 to expand its efforts.

William W. Asbury, vice president for student affairs, said the HUD grant will assist Penn State in the continuing development of its urban agenda in Philadelphia.

"This grant also will enable 4-H to expand its impact on the city. Currently, some 12,000 Philadelphia youngsters are involved, making it the largest 4-H program of all 67 Pennsylvania counties. The After School Program will enable 4-H to involve even more children."

The HUD grant is "seed money," given with the stipulation that additional support for the After School Program come from local residents, community groups, the academic community at all levels, state and federal agencies, and the business community.

According to Elmore Hunter, Philadelphia County Extension agent and director of community relations, the three-year grant funding will be funneled through the Philadelphia Housing Authority to Penn State Cooperative Extension. Programming will be offered at five public housing development sites from 3:30 to 7:30 p.m. Monday through Friday for 41 weeks in the calendar year and from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. for eight weeks in the summer.

The 4-H After School Program focues on homework and academic tutoring, 4-H "learn by doing" projects, community service, and nutrition and fitness education."

"This is real exciting for our 4-H staff," Hunter said. "We are very fortunate to be selected for the grant. Bruce Richards led the effort to write the funding proposal on which we've been working very hard. It's gratifying to know that our efforts have finally paid off."

he said the key element in the grant program is the identification of corporate sponsors who, together with Cooperative Extension and Housing Authority stafff, will form a vision team. Corporate sponsors in Philadelphis are Mellon Bank, SpectraGuard, a security company, and Appomatox Development Corporation, a training and development company.

"The Vision Team will attempt to bring others to the table to see how they can provide resources for the program," Hunter said. "We want to make certain that the program survives past its three-year funding life."

Plans call for the appointment of a director to oversee the program and for two persons at each site to operate program activities.

"Cooperative Extension has been working with the Philadelphia Housing Authority since 1985 on after-school programming," Hunter said. "We have done it the traditional way, utilizing a few small grants and the regular 4-H program.

"Now, however, the HUD funding will provide for a concentrated effort to make a change in the lives of young people and their parents. We hope to say that over a three-year period, we have empowered people to improve their lives."

ANSWER — Oops! We printed that a reader wanted to know where to buy lye that is used in making homemade soup. Thanks to Brenda Breisch, Bloomsburg, who caught the error and wrote that lye for soap is available in supermarkets. She uses the Red Devil brand that is arranged on the shelf with drain cleaners.

ANSWER — A Millersburg reader wanted an address for ordering candle making supplies. Thanks to Mrs. David Fisher, Lewistown, who sent the following address. Pourette Mfg. Co., P.O. Box 15220, Seattle, WA 98115 or phone (206) 525-4488.

ANSWER — Edward Clark, Frazer, wanted to know where to get seeds for Dr. Martin lima pole beans. Thanks to Becky Thomas, Manheim, who writes that the seeds are available through the heirloom seed project at Landis Valley Museum, write for the catalogue at 2451 Kissel Hill Rd., Lancaster, PA 17601 or call (717) 569-0401. It's a wonderful catalog that offers old seed varieties of many types and gives brief historical notes on each.

At the official Nebraska Test site, 8000 Series Tractors recently set new standards in power, hydraulics, and fuel efficiency. You'll get the same performance on your farm – pull high-draft loads faster, lift more and maneuver easier, and shell out far less for diesel.

Tractors set records for highest hydraulic power available at the remote outlets (SCVs).

Record-setting fuel efficiency.

John Deere also proved big power doesn't mean big fuel bills. The 160-hp 8100, 180-hp 8200, and 225-hp 8400 Tractors set new records for average drawbar fuel economy in their respective power classes. (The 200-hp 8300 was second only to the John Deere 4955, the most fuel-efficient, 200-hp tractor ever tested at Nebraska.) The 8400 also set the record for best drawbar fuel economy at maximum power (2,000 rpm).

John Deere is rewriting the record books... at the official test site, and on farms like yours. Put record-setting power, pull, and efficiency to work in your fields. Visit your John Deere dealer to test drive an 8000 Series Tractor today.

Protect your equipment investment with the superior design and quality of John Deere oil filters. They meet rigid John Deere standards and fit most John Deere 10, 20, 30, 40, and 50 Series Utility Tractors.

Cook's • Question • Corner

ANSWER — Judy Looney, New Castle, wanted a recipe for a cake with a hot milk dressing served on it. Thanks to Charlotte Hoffman, Spring Grove, for sending a recipe that she copied from a televison cooking program.

Creole Custard Pudding

2 eggs
1 cup sugar
¾ cup flour
1 cup cream
3 cups milk, scalded
½ teaspoon almond extract
½ teaspoon vanilla

Beat together eggs, add sugar, mix until sugar is blended. Add the flour and blend then add cream and blend. Add scalded milk and blend. Return to heat and cook mixture until thickened. Cool slightly and serve over any good pound cake.

ANSWER — Rosene Leinbach, Leola, wanted to know how to make stuffed tomatoes. Thanks to Cindy Stoodley, Shickshinny for sending her recipe.

Baked Stuffed Tomatoes

6 medium tomatoes
½ small green pepper, finely chopped
¼ cup Parmesan cheese
⅓ cup croutons
1 teaspoon salt

Remove stem ends from tomatoes; cut thin slice from bottom of each tomato to prevent tipping. Remove pulp from each tomato, leaving a ½ -inch wall; chop enough pulp to measure ⅓ cup

Mix tomato pulp, green pepper, cheese, croutons, and salt. Fill tomatoes with tomato-cheese mixture. Place filled tomatoes in ungreased oblong baking dish. Cook uncovered in 350 degree oven until tomatoes are heated thoroughly, about 20 minutes. Garnish with parsley sprigs or crumbled crispy fried bacon if desired.

County Residents Recognized At 4-H Fair

This year's 4-H Fair had something for everyone, and those who attended were rewarded visually with a variety of eye-catching exhibits on display—from clothing of original design to home grown vegetables to models and ceramics. Everyone who exhibited received a 4-H Fair ribbon and then there were some who received special recognition for a job well done.

In the 4-H Clothing & Textiles category, the following 4-H'ers received a "Clover Award" for outstanding work: Lori Craig of Souderton, Rebekah Moyer and Ashley Pevear of Harleysville, Ellen Nave of Horsham, Tori Myers of Red Hill, Mary Earl of Limerick, Karina Price of Telford, and Megan Sly of Gilbertsville. Champion in class honors went to Lori Craig, Ellen Nave, Ashley Pevear and Megan Sly. Tori Myers was selected grand champion of all 4-H youth clothing classes. Reserve champion honors went to Karina Price.

In the open clothing youth category, Cayce Bean of Schwenksville received a clover and champion in class honors. In the adult open clothing category, clovers were won by Lisa Guerriero of Worcester and Cherie Braun of Lansdale. Cherie also took grand champion honors, while Lisa came in second as reserve champion.

Grand champion honors in the open quilt class went to Eva Beagle of Harleysville. Gwen Traub of Horsham was reserve champion. Both received clover ribbons as well. Gwen was also champion in a second quilting class. In other open craft classes, Kristen Satko of Cheltenham was champion of the pottery class. Jennifer Connor of Schwenksville won a clover in the open art class. The top 4-H pottery and ceramics awards went to Jennifer Ryskalchick fo Cheltenham.

New this year was the 4-H educational poster class. Champion in class ribbons in this category were awarded to Ellen Nave of Horsham and Jennifer Wiegand of Fort Washington. Of the 4-H rockets displayed, the champion in class honors went to Zach Bean of Schwenksville. Candymaking was a popular project of the Ambler-Upper Dublin 4-H Club. Matthew Eyer of Maple Glen was awarded a clover and champion in class for his efforts.

The 4-H basketry class was especially beautiful. Clovers were won by Ellen Nave of Horsham, Rachel Green of Trappe, Lisa Drauschak of Pottstown, Cayce Bean of Schwenksville, Jim Sherman of Collegeville, and Gaby Bold of Zieglerville. Cayce was named grand champion, while Ellen took reserve champion honors. In orienteering, Ellen Nave provided the best exhibit, earning herself a champion in class award. Ryan Kadwill of Collegeville won the same award in 4-H card collecting. The best 4-H Seeing Eye Puppy projects were exhibited by Chris and Mary Erickson of Collegeville and Daniel Lafferty of Royersford, who won the following awards, respectively: grand champion, champion in class, and reserve champion. Ellen Nave of Horsham had the best stamp collection while Michelle Hallman of Souderton placed second as reserve champion.

Woodworking projects were found in abundance. The grand champion ribbon was awarded to Daniel Lafferty of Royersford, while Tara Myers of Hatboro ran a close second as reserve champion. Vegetables were also a sight to see. 4-H winners included Chris Erickson of Collegeville, reserve champion and champion in class, Daniel Lafferty. Adults showed off their vegetable gardening skills, too. Mark Christy of Schwenksville was selected grand champion and Karin Ruch of Green Lane was reserve champion. In the open flower category, Karin Ruch was also named champion in class. Sheila Sykora of Collegeville won in the dried vegetable category, as champion. She also won the largest zucchini contest. Sharon Barkhymer of Royersford won the largest tomato contest and Kelli Augustine of Skippack won the largest sunflower contest for the second year in a row. The "most grotesque vegetable" was exhibited by Greg Betz of Skippack.

In other competition, the best outdoor educational club display award went to the 4-H Livestock Club. The best indoor display was won by Jacob Garges of Telford. The best club scrapbook was won by the 4-H Dairy Cow Club. The Silver Pails Dairy Goat Club had many educational posters about goats on display. Special awards in this category went to Megan Sly of Gilbertsville, grand champion and Gretchen Sample of Pipersville, reserve champion.

You, too, can win a ribbon at the next Montgomery County 4-H Fair. All county residents are invited to show their finished products at the Fair. Next year, there will even be a special "Kids Class" for youth ages eight and under. For more information about entering and about 4-H in your area, call the Penn State Cooperative Extension Office at (610) 489-4315.

York County 4-H Beef

York County 4-H Beef Club met Oct. 2 at the 4-H Center in Bair Station at 7:30 p.m. A report was given on the success of the York Fair Show and Sale. Everyone was reminded of the Livestock Sale Committee meeting to be held at the extension office on Oct. 24 at 7 p.m. to discuss next year and take suggestions for making the show even better next year.

Research will be done regarding the possibility of purchasing a York County 4-H Steer for the beef banquet or having one donated back to the club. Also interest was expressed in having a supreme champion heifer class at the York Fair Show.

The next meeting will be held Nov. 6. Election of officers will be held and the Steer of Merit report will be given. Record books are due at the November meeting.

FFA HAPPENINGS

FFA Livestock Judging

TIMONIUM, Md. — Recently, youth competed in a variety of livestock judging contests here at the 4-H and FFA State Fair.

The Catoctin FFA Chapter won the first place banner in the livestock judging contest.

The Livestock contest is sponsored by R.D. Bowman & Sons, Inc. as a special project of the Maryland FFA Foundation. The high scoring individual for Livestock was Missy Willard, FFA member of the Catoctin Chapter. The Flintstone Chapter took the second place banner in the contest.

According to the Contest Superintendent Martin Hamilton, 4-H agent for the Cooperative Extension Service of the University of Maryland, there were 10 teams with 34 members participating. Contestants were asked to place six classes of livestock of four animals each and to prepare and present one set of oral reasons. Lee Heavner of the Flintstone FFA Chapter was the teacher chairperson and supervised scoring.

The winning teams in the livestock judging contest from first through fifth were Catoctin, Flintstone, South Carroll, South Garrett, and Queen Anns.

Participants receiving Gold Medal awards were: 1. Missy Willard. 2. Tammy Green. 3. Dave Stickley.

FFA Dairy Cattle Contest

The Francis Scott Key FFA Chapter won the first place banner in the dairy cattle contest held during the Maryland FFA and 4-H State Fair judging contests.

The FFA contest is sponsored by the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative Association, Inc. as a special of the Maryland FFA Foundation.

Trophies were presented to the high scoring individual and the top reasons scoring team. The trophies, which were made available by Darryl Walker of Mendolson Terrace Farms, are given each year in honor of John Morris and Dr. Gordon Cairnes, retired staff members of the University of Maryland. The Catoctin FFA Chapter took the second place contest banner.

According to Contest Superintendent and Official Judge Dr. Lee Majeskie, dairy extension specialist in the Animal Science Department at the University of Maryland at College Park, there were 10 teams registered with 28 members participating.

Contestants were required to place six classes of four dairy animals, place a pedigree class, and prepare and present oral reasons on one of those classes. Terrie Shank of the Clear Spring FFA and Sue Lowery of the Boonsboro FFA Chapter coordinated and supervised the contest scoring.

Participants receiving a Gold Medal award: 1. Mark Valentine. 2. Neal Peckins. 3. J. C. Schnebly.

FFA Poultry Judging Contest

The Clear Spring High FFA Chapter won the first place banner in the poultry judging contest held during the Maryland FFA and 4-H State Fair judging contests.

The poultry contest is sponsored by the Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc. as a special project of the Maryland FFA Foundation.

The high scoring individual for the contest was Matt Michael of the Clear Spring FFA Chapter. The Clear Spring FFA Chapter took the second place banner in the contest.

According to Contest Superintendent Dr. Charles Waybeck of the Poultry Science Department at the University of Maryland, the contest included evaluation and placing of live birds, ready to cook poultry classes, and processed chicken porducts. Contestants were also required to identify broiler parts and grade eggs for interior and exterior quality. In addition, oral reasons or written factors were required on some classes and a written multiple choice test was completed by contestants.

Charles Cramer of the Walkersville FFA Chapter was the teacher chairperson and supervised scoring.

The top scoring individuals receiving gold medals were: 1. Matt Michael. 2. Richard Sprouse. 3. Mark Michael.

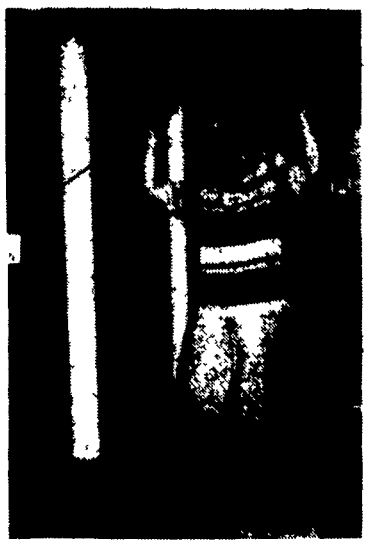
FFA Safe Tractor Operator Contest

The event was sponsored by Eastern Equipment Dealers Association as a special project of the Maryland FFA Foundation. The second place individual for the Safe Tractor Operators Contest was Jason Barkdoll of the Boonsboro FFA Chapter.

According to Contest Superintendent Dr. Lee Grant of the Department of Agricultral Engineering at the University of Maryland at College Park, the contest consisted of three components — a written examination, safe tractor operation, and a problem solving activity.

Each student drove a tractor through two courses, one with a two-wheel implement and one with four-wheel implement towed behind. The students were evaluated during the driving section on safety, time, and their accuracy while driving the course. In the problem solving, each student was given a tractor that would not start and had to find the problem and correct it.

The top scoring individuals receiving gold medals were: 1. Jason Mayne. 2. Jason Barkdoll. 3. Gary Smith.



MHS student and FFA member Shaun Le scores a "hole in one" on a miniature golf course which students created as an FFA business project.

FFA Suits MHS Students To A "Tee"

The advantages of FFA membership are "par for the course" for several Milton Hershey School (MHS) FFA members who recently opened a miniature golf course for MHS students and staff members in a barn at student home Vian.

Conducted as an FFA business project, the enterprise began last spring when students designed the mini-golf course, built it to scale, then used their design to completely renovate a donated miniature golf course. MHS Senior Hall Teacher Don Hoffer directed the students' repair and refurbishing work as a construction class project.

Following the completion of the course, students worked with adult staff members over the summer to install the course in a gutted school barn. Tasks included removing, reglazing, and reinstalling windows and pouring concrete.

Designing the course around the roadway theme, the students also created score cards through the school's communications technology course with names such as "Falling Rocks," "Cattle Crossing," and "Dead End" assigned to the 18 holes.

Currently, students are managing the course, collecting fees, and maintaining books. According to MHS student Rey Del Rio, golf course manager, at least 40 MHS students and staff members play the greens on an average weekend.

Describing what he learned from the project, MHS student Bob Stroup, golf course treasurer, said, "The responsibilities that this golf course has given us will help us in the future. It's helping us to learn how to take care of property, run a business, and work with other people."

Another student said, "When I look at the course, it gives me a feeling of accomplishment."

Brothersvalley FFA Attends Conference

Eight Brothersvalley FFA members attended a two-day Made For Excellence Conference at Hidden Valley Resort.

The program was presented by the National FFA Organization in cooperation with the United States Department of Education.

During the conference, FFA members found what makes them unique and special, how they could develop and maintain a positive outlook on life, and how they could take control of their lives. The program also provided knowledge and skills on how FFA members can set and achieve their goals, discovering effective teamwork strategies, exploring group communication, and motivating yourself as well as others.

FFA members attending the personal development conference were Patty Bird, Jesse Rogers, Doug Deaner, Jonathan Dickey, Bruce Hartman, Justin Miller, Bill Swift and Matt Coleman. Doyle Paul, FFA adviser, accompanied the group and participated in a progress report on developing a statewide strategic plan for agricultural education.

Lead Poisoning Still Threat

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)—Lead poisoning, a health hazard that can be traced back to the days of the Roman Empire, is still very much a viable threat to adults and especially children in many homes across the United States, says an expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

In Pennsylvania, 17 percent of children under age 6 have unsafe levels of lead in their blood, according to the 1990 census. Phyllis Adams, associate professor of agricultural education and extension, estimates about 56 million homes across the country contain some leaded material—approximately 3 million tons altogether.

"Although the maladies resulting from lead poisoning have been known for centuries, exposure to lead has continued to be a common problem in both technologically advanced and developing countries," Adams says. "In the United States, lead poisoning continues to be one of the most prevalent and preventable childhood health problems."

In any home built before 1960, lead can be found in, paint, water, pipes and dust. Adams says lead poisoning cases most often occur in run-down, decaying multiple family housing and during renovation projects. Indeed, Children's Hospital in Boston reported that 40 percent of its lead poisoning cases between 1987 and 1990 were the result of home renovation projects.

Symptoms of lead poisoning, which include stomach aches, headaches, irritability, vomiting, constipation, and fatigue, often do not appear until lead levels are very high. In addition, most of the symptoms can be easily confused with the flu, which makes diagnosis difficult.

Although lead-related health problems can affect adults, Adams says lead poisoning is particularly harmful to children. Children affected by lead can have delayed mental development, speech and hearing defects, and damage to the central nervous system. In adults, lead can affect production of red blood cells and impair liver and kidney functions. Lead traces also are stored in the skeleton—sometimes for decades—and can re-enter the bloodstream of a pregnant mother and harm the fetus. Mothers who have been exposed to lead also can pass the substance through breast milk.

"Excess exposure to lead affects children of all socioeconomic backgrounds," Adams says. "It is very important for all infants and their siblings under age 6 to be screened for the presence of lead in their system."

The biggest source of lead in most homes built before 1978 is lead-based paint. Sale of the product was banned in 1978, but Adams says all types of paint manufactured prior to the ban could contain lead. Particularly suspect are the high-gloss products used on moldings, trim, bathrooms and kitchens. Painted windows, which produce lead-laden dust from frequently being opened and closed, are often a prime suspect in lead poisoning cases. Window sills, which are a tempting target for teething toddlers, are also very high risk areas.

Homeowners can protect themselves by covering the lead-based paint with a latex or oil-based paint. If the paint is bubbling or cracking, Adams recommends hiring professionals to remove it or carefully following professional lead-removal guidelines. Do-it-yourselfers should never try to sand, scrape or remove paint with chemicals or head guns unless the paint has been tested.

"Sanding and scraping can produce lethal levels of dust that everyone in the household may breathe in," Adams says. "Chemical removers and heat guns can also give off lead-laden fumes."

Lead also can be found in water pipes fastened together with lead-based solder. In very old homes, entire pipes may be made from lead. Adams recommends testing a home's water system. If the water has high levels of lead, she suggests letting water run for several minutes before using it. In addition, hot water leaches lead from pipes faster than cold water, a factor that may require the homeowner to update the plumbing.

Lead also can be found in stained glass, ceramic glazes on dishes and pottery from outside the United States, car and industrial emissions, jewelry, batteries, fishing sinkers and souvenirs.

Because lead threats are rarely noticed until levels are very high, Adams recommends an aggressive prevention program. Children should be given a blood test for lead, which is just a simple finger prick, at 12 months and at 24 months. A balanced diet based on foods high in iron and calcium is also beneficial.

"Children should wash their hands often," Adams says. "Damp mop and dust your home often—especially near windows and doors. Homeowners also can wash surfaces frequently with a solution of water and tri-sodium phosphate or powdered dishwashing detergent."

Homeowners can test for surface lead levels by removing a sample for laboratory testing. Professionals also can use X-ray fluorescence, which does not disturb the paint surface. Do-it-yourself kits are available, but these products will not indicate how much lead is present.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency offers a guide called "Reducing Lead Hazards When Remodeling Your Home." Call (717) 783-8451 for a free copy. Information on lead abatement also is available free of charge from such agencies as the Consumer Products Safety Commission (404) 730-2870, the National Safety Council (800) 424-5323, and the Department of Housing and Urban Development (800) 743-5323.

Vegetable Consumption Study Unveiled

RIDGEWAY (Elk Co.) — As nutrition research continues to show that consuming plenty of fruits and vegetables may prevent cancer and ensure good health, it is not surprising that many people know to include more produce in their diets.

But according to a new study, Fruit and Vegetable Consumption: Consumer Attitudes versus Behavior, Americans are consuming much less produce than they believe.

The study, commissioned by the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association, examined menu diaries kept by 2,000 households. While 96 percent agreed that people should include more fruits and vegetables in their diets, consumers overestimated the amount of fruits and vegetables they really ate by an astounding 33 percent.

Most startling, two of the most health-conscious groups — women and young adults — are the worst offenders. On average, women overstated their consumption of fruits and vegetables by 40 percent (4.78 reported servings/day compared to 2.89 actual servings) and young adults (ages 18-34) overestimated their actual consumption by 43 percent (4.70 reported servings of fruits and vegetables compared to 2.68 actual servings.)

On the opposite end of the food guide pyramid, consumers greatly underestimated the amount of fats, oils and sweets consumed. People reported they ate just two servings of these products a day (1.96 servings/day), when in reality they consumed 3.80 servings/day — nearly twice as much as perceived.

Great Pumpkin Roundup

DOYLESTOWN (Bucks Co.)—Bucks County 4-H recently held its annual Great Pumpkin Round-Up. The Pumpkin Project is open to all youth between the ages of 8-19 in Bucks County. Youth receive seeds, plants, a 4-H project book, and several newsletters throughout the growing season. At harvest time participants can enter any of the various classes with their pumpkin creations. Categories were: largest pumpkin, most uniform pair of pumpkins, best carved face, best painted face, and best pumpkin recipes including sub-divisons for desserts and non-desserts.

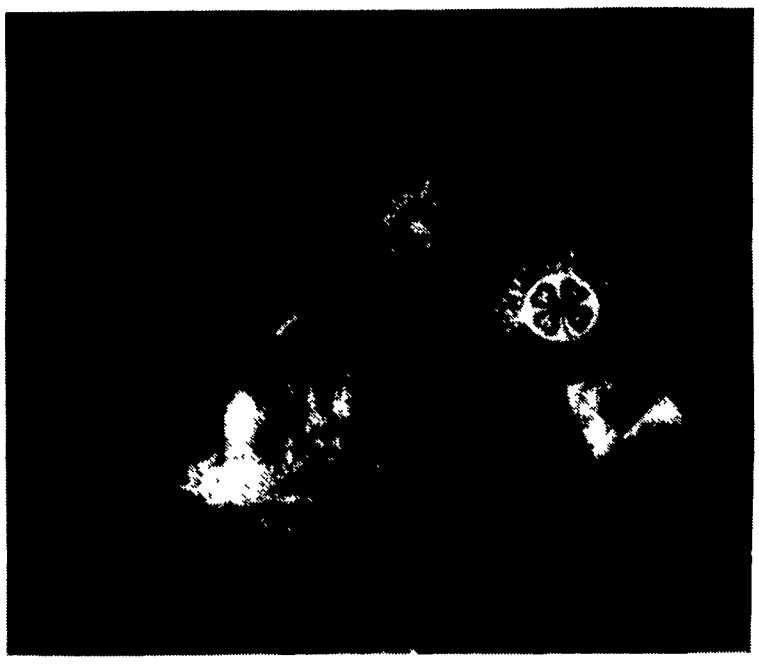
Each year the Burpee Seed Company donates a variety of fresh pumpkin seeds for the Bucks County 4-H program. Ken Ludwig, head of commercial seed sales for Burpee Seeds, and Chester Williams, a Bucks County Cooperative Extension master gardener, acted as the judges for the Great Pumpkin Round-Up held at the Churchville Nature Center's Annual Pumpkin Festival.

The largest pumpkin was grown by 11-year-old Gene Bonner from the Oakford 4-H club. His pumpkin weighed in at 89½ lbs. and was grown from Burpee Prizewinner seed. Second place went to Scott Hibbs from Yardley, Julia Krout from the Hilltown 4-H club placed third.

Best carved face went to nine-year-old Emily Merritt of the Milford 4-H club. Runner-up in this category was Heather Gordon from the Yardley 4-H club.

Best painted face was won by eight-year-old Allison Ball from the Milford 4-H club. Second place went to Chris Christensen, 12, from Plumsteadville.

Scott Hibbs, a member of The Edgewood 4-H club had the best entry in the uniform pairs category, with Christ Christensen coming in a close second.



Allison Ball of Milford 4-H Club shows off the winning entry in the painted face category.

Winning pumpkin recipes were submitted by Emily Merritt (1st place non-dessert entry) and Chris Christensen (best pumpkin dessert entry).

Foster Grandparents Discover Pleasure In Volunteering

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Some people may call them old. Some may call them retired but more than 500 grandmas and grandpas packed the Marriot ballroom on Monday and shared their enthusiasm for a job that keeps them busy at least 20 hours a week.

Called the Foster Grandparent Program, participants are 60 years or older and volunteer 20 hours per week serving as grandmas or grandpas to children and teenagers who have special needs.

"I feel like I'm doing something worthwhile," said Marjorie Deitrich. After years of helping her husband George on their Union County farm, Marjorie felt bored after they retired from active farming.

Through the prodding of an acquaintance, Marjorie attended a foster grandparenting seminar.

"I was really scared," Marjorie said of her assignment to a school that she describes as a place for wayward boys.

But, it took only one day for Marjorie to fall in love with the boys who range from 11 to 18 years old.

"I'm really attached to them. At least five of them are really special to me," Marjorie said of the boys who seem just like normal grandchildren to her.

She helps them with their homework and assists the school teacher in whatever needs to be done.

It's her relationship with the boys that increases the value of her time spent as a tutor. The boys affectionately call her Grandma Marge.

While Grandma Marge thinks it is her duty to help the boys, she found that by letting them help her may make the relationship healthier. She said that one day she had difficulty walking but was reluctant to ask for help. Finally, she asked one of the boys if she could hang onto his arm while she walked.

"I thought you'd never ask," he said as he eagerly offered his arm. "My grandma always holds onto my arm and you remind me of her."

Since then, he waits outside for her to arrive each day and accompanies her around the school.

While some retired people shied away from joining the program because of the time commitment, Lillian Werley of Topton counters that the sacrifice is well worth it.

"This (being a foster grandma) is my first option. They need me. If I can help someone along the way then my living is not in vain," she said.

Lillian works as a volunteer aide in an elementary school. "They just call me Grandma. And I call them all 'Honey,' because I can't remember each student's name and I don't want to show partiality," she said.

Although Lillian said she is hesitant to drive on bad roads and it is not required of "grandmas," she is also reluctant to skip any days.

"If you want to do something, do it correctly or not at all," is an adage her father taught her to live by. She knows the value of helping others, she said, because her husband died in a 1951 farming accident that left her a widow with three preschoolers.

"People took time out to help me. I got so much help," Lillian said.

Her whole life is now devoted to helping others, not only as a foster grandparent but as a volunteer in other areas.

Lillian has three sons, nine grandchildren, and three great grandchildren. "I just love them all to bits," she said of both her natural born and foster grandchildren.

Unlike Lillian, Fern Adams has no children or grandchildren by birth. But she volunteers as an aide at a Hamburg-area elementary school five days a week.

"I'm new. I just started in September, but I like helping children learn to read," she said.

"The foster grandparenting program is very educational, rewarding, and fulfilling," Lillian said.

Just like the students they serve, foster grandparents also are graded on the help they provide.

Recently Lillian was thrilled that her annual review showed outstanding and excellent marks for her help in the classroom.

Not all grandparents received the same verbal affirmation that Lillian does, but that doesn't make their services less rewarding.

Rachael Hess, who with her husband Arthur made a living shipping milk in Berks County, offered to help at the Hamburg Center for the mentally handicapped.

She said, "I take care of two girls that I don't want to give up. One just wants to hold my hand and won't let go. She can't talk or anything, but I talk and fuss over her all the time. And I'm sure she appreciates it because she never lets go of my hand."

Rachael said that she applied for the job because she wanted to better herself. That was six years ago. Rachael said that she never gets tired or discouraged from going to the center five days a week.

"I don't know anything better that one would want to do," she said of her responsibilities at the center.

The needs of the children served by the Foster Grandparent Program include school dropouts, teen runaways, babies born HIV positive, children coping with abandonment, homelessness, abuse and neglect, AIDS, chronic or terminal illness, physical, mental and emotional disabilities, drug and alcohol abuse, mental illness, illiteracy, learning and developmental disabilities, juvenile delinquency, and teen pregnancy.

Pennsylvania has more than 900 foster grandparents who assist more than 80,000 children with Rachael Hess of Lehartsville cares for a girl who can neither talk nor walk. "She just wants to hold my hand and never let go. She needs me. I don't ever want to give her up," Rachael said of her charge.

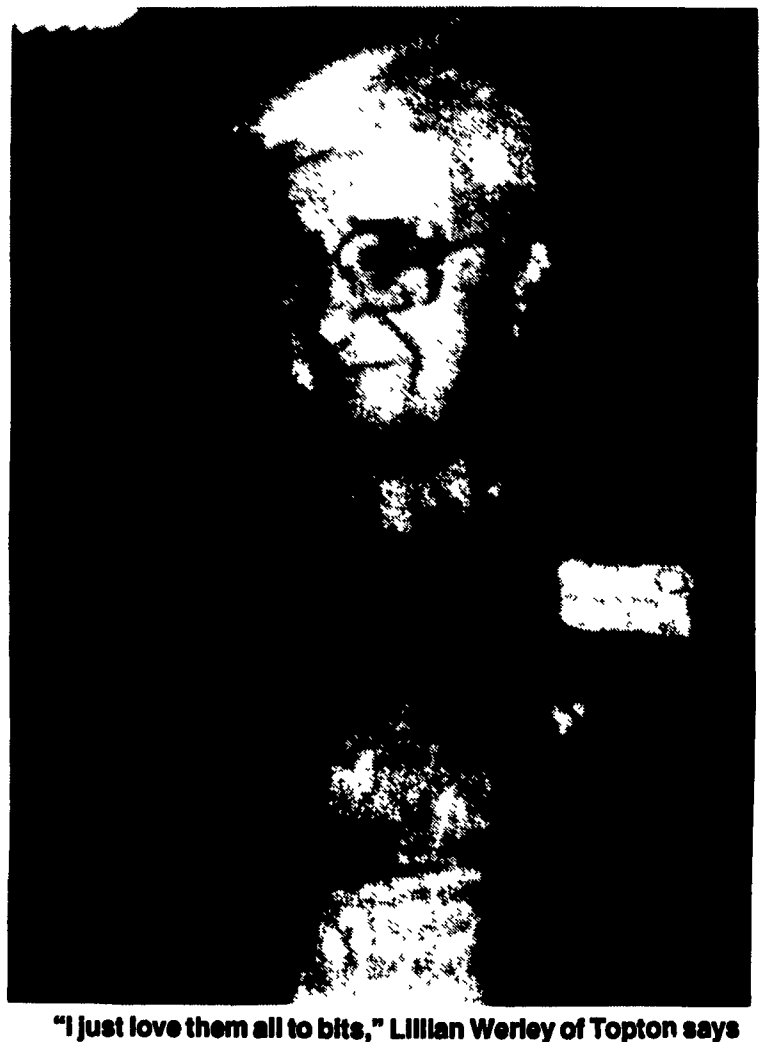
Marjorie Dietrick of New Columbia is known as Grandma Marge to troubled youth. It took a lot of prodding to convince her to give foster grandparenting a try. Now she doesn't want to stop.

Fern Adams is one of 900 foster grandparents who serve special needs children in Pennsylvania.



"I just love them all to bits," Lillian Werley of Topton says of her natural born and foster grandchildren.

All Gardens Great & Small

by York Co. Horticultural Agent Tom Becker

No indoor gardeners can resist forcing amaryllis bulbs with their large, showy flowers. They can be easily forced into bloom year after year.

Amaryllis bulbs are sold in teh fall singularly or in a planting kit which includes the container and potting soil. Often, the amaryllis is sold as a bare bulb or already planted.

There are more than 250 cultivars available with a variety of flower forms like trumpet, belladonna, leopoldii, miniature, double and orchid flowered.

Colors available range from dark reds, pinks and oranges to the lighter colors of yellow, peach, salmon, cream, white and two-tone. "Picotee," for example, produces 6- to 8-inch, pure white flowers with a clearly defined thin edging of red on each petal.

Amaryllis leaves are dark green and strap-like. They average about 1½ inches wide and 18 inches long. The stout, leafless flower stalk rises high above the foliage, often 18 to 24 inches tall. The stalk can support four or more flowers that may be as large as 8 to 10 inches across. If you are looking for something smaller, miniature amaryllis cultivars become top heavy when they flower.

An amaryllis kit often includes the container and the soil mix. A well-drained potting soil is preferred. When planting amaryllis bulbs that you have previously forces, knock them out of their old pots and use new potting soil. Plant the bulbs in the soil mix with the top one-third of the bulb exposed.

Amaryllis bulbs are traditionally potted from November through March. However, bulbs can be forced to flower at nearly any time of the year. It usually takes six to eight weeks from planting until flowers appear. If you have more than one amaryllis bulb to force, stagger the potting dates by a week or two, so that you have a longer flowering period.

After potting, keep the plant in a cool (60-65 degrees F), dark location and water only enough to keep the soil moist. Once roots have established and top growth is evident, move the plant to a sunny location and give it more water. As new leaves and flower spikes begin to show, the temperature can be increased to 75 degrees F for earliest flowering. When in bloom, cooler conditions will prolong the floral display.

Also, removal of the anthers will prevent pollination and subsequent seed set. The anthers are the yellow ends of the long filament emerging from the flower. This procedure prolongs the flower life.

After the flowers fade, remove the flower stalk. Keep the foliage healthy and growing so it can manufacture food for next year's flowers. Water with any houseplant fertilizer once or twice a month. After about four months, when the foliage turns brown, let the soil go almost dry for about three months. Keep the dormant bulb in an out-of-the-way location in your basement or garage.

Occasionally an amaryllis will send up foliage, but no flower stalk. There are a number of factors that may cause this. First of all, the bulb may be too young to flower. Younger bulbs are smaller than mature bulbs, so always purchase large, mature bulbs. Never cut back the foliage immediately after blooming—the plants need the foliage and continued growth to build up food reserves for the next cycle. During this time, amaryllis must have adequate sunlight, water and fertilizer for proper growth and reblooming.

exceptional needs.

Harris Wofford, a former U.S. senator, is the newly appointed CEO of the program that marked its 30th anniversary this year.

Participants must be 60 years or older to participate in the program. As long as grandparents are able and want to participate in the program, they may. Last year, a woman from Montgomery County retired from the program at 99 years of age.

Volunteers are reimbursed for transportation expenses.

Those interested in knowing more about the program should contact the Office of Aging in their respective counties. Volunteers serve through 300 programs sponsored and managed by local nonprofit agencies in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands.

WORK WATCH

The Work Watch Is Back!

In the mid-1980's we sold hundreds of work watches to hard-working individuals like yourself who needed an accurate, dependable timepiece. They needed a watch that would withstand the dust, moisture, bumps, and temperatures encountered on the farm, in the orchard, and in the woods. Many who bought the work watch told us it was the best watch they had ever owned. Now, due to the past success and the present need, we are again offering the work watch through Lancaster Farming.

Our work watch has all the features needed to endure the punishment you will put it through. The WATER RESISTANT seal will protect your watch when you irrigate fields, fix broken water systems, get milk splashed on your arm while feeding calves, or walk the fence in the rain, to find out where your cattle are getting out. Being SHOCK RESISTANT, your work watch will continue to work when it is slapped by a cow's tail, a falling board, or the belt shield that your arm slams against when your wrench slips off the bolt. While your watch is scraped by branches, rubbed against walls, and knocked against machinery, the low profile, SCRATCH RESISTANT, glass crystal will resist the scratches and cracks that render watches unreadable. Finally, the BATTERY POWERED QUARTZ movement of your work watch is accurate to within 2 minutes per year, and does not need to be wound, meaning that your watch will be on time, all the time, without any effort on your part.

A final proof of the strength of this watch and of its suitability to your needs is the warranty. If your work watch stops running within THREE YEARS of the date of purchase, the manufacturer will repair or replace your watch at no charge. This is one of the longest warranties in the watch industry. The manufacturer's confidence in this watch means that you can have confidence in its durability and can know that this is the only work watch you will need to buy for the next three years.

Houseplants Brought In For Winter Need Special Attention

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)—Those houseplants you've kept outside all summer may be harboring unwanted guests.

"When bringing plants inside for the winter, it's important to keep them on your porch for a few days, where they won't be killed by a frost and where you can check them for insects and other pests," says Dr. Robert Nuss, professor of ornamental horticulture in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "Even one or two insects can be the start of an infestation."

Pests to look for are aphids, mealybugs, spider mites, white flies and scale.

Aphids are small, black or green crawling insects that live in thick colonies along the soft parts of stems, sometimes covering them entirely. They excrete a sweet liquid called honeydew, which often attracts ants. "Aphids are quite destructive," says Nuss. "They cause distorted and curled leaves, malformed flowers, and hardened buds."

Mealybugs are about the same size as aphids but are white and fuzzy. Masses of them, resembling pieces of cotton, nestle and lay eggs where leaves and branches attach to stalks. Mealybugs can stunt and kill plants by depleting their fluids.

White flies also are small and white, but unlike mealybugs, will take flight if you shake the plant. "You'll never find just one white fly on a plant," says Nuss. "They come in quantities and can spread to all the plants in your house."

Spide mites are miniscule but very destructive. An infested plant will have yellow-speckled leaves and may be covered with tentlike webs. "The mites look like grains of cayenne pepper," says Nuss. "They're easy to spot if you hold a piece of white paper under the plant and shake the leaves so the mites drop onto the paper."

Scale appears as blister-like areas on stems and the undersides of leaves. These areas can be circular, oyster-shell-shaped or rectangular and are colored white, brown, grey or black. Scale also produces honeydew, which may drip from the leaves. "Scale seriously stunts growth," says Nuss. "If not treated, it can kill the plant and spread to other plants.

"With a small infestation, you may be able to wipe the pests off with a Q-Tip dipped in alcohol," says Nuss. "Rinsing the plant under a gentle stream of water for a few minutes can wash away insects and eggs. Keep checking the plant for a recurring infestation during the next couple of weeks."

It's also important to gently dig around the roots and look for pests in the soil, such as sow bugs, millipedes and slugs. You can remove most of these by hand, or you may want to rinse the soil off with a garden hose and repot the plant in new soil.

Serious, persistent infestations can be treated with an insecticidal soap spray or a multipurpose insecticide containing a miticide. Both are available from gardening centers. "Be careful to follow the directions on the label exactly," says Nuss. "Excess spray can be toxic to the plant. If you spray too closely to the leaves, the aerosol propellant can freeze them."

After spraying, keep the plant in a large plastic bag for a few hours to contain and concentrate the spray, then isolate it for about two weeks or until you're sure it's pest-free. "It also is a good idea to follow all these precautions if you've bought a plant or received one as a gift," says Nuss. "Even well-cared-for nursery plants can harbor pests."

Fall also is the time to repot plants that have been outdoors all summer. Turn the plant upside down and tap the bottom of the pot while supporting the plant. The roots and soil probably will come out in one piece. If the roots are crowded into the shape of the pot, it's time to remove the old soil and move the plant to a pot one size larger.

If the plant has grown excessively, you may want to trim it to an appropriate indoor size. "Trimming can stimulate more growth, so you might need to do it again later," says Nuss.

When the plant is repotted, trimmed and pest free, place it inside where it will get at least a few hours of full sun every day, and rotate it once a week so it will grow straight. Fertilize moderately and water only when the soil is completely dry. "It's best even to let the plant wilt slightly before watering," says Nuss. "Overwatering quickly can kill plants."

Is setting your plants outside worth all the hassle? "The advantages are great," says Nuss. "Sunlight, rain and warm weather produce a flush of healthy growth, and the pests usually are easy to get rid of. Overall, it's worth it."

The weather affects all of our lives. Sometimes in a pleasant way and sometimes otherwise. Inclement weather on a special day like a wedding can cause havoc. Whether it is a rain storm in June or a snow storm in January.

Allen and I got married on a Saturday when one of the worst snow storms in years happened. But, somehow we managed even though we could not leave on a wedding trip.

I remember another November, long ago, when I brought a baby son home from the hospital and was amazed to see bare limbs on the trees. Just a few days before the leaves were hanging yellow and brown on all the trees.

This past week a rain and wind storm blew down a wild cherry tree behind our house. As it fell it broke a small quince tree that my husband planted for me. This year it had the whole way of two pieces of fruit. The small sour cherry tree nearby fared better. I was surprised how quickly my husband had it all sawed and piled.

Luckily our weather was very pleasant when our daughter and her family visited us from Texas. We had a chance to become acquainted with our grandson, Bryan. He is in the crawling stage and had to be watched carefully. We walked the one-half mile or more to the farm to visit our son. Bryan was fascinated with the express wagon's wheels and almost fell out watching them.

The weather affects our work — can we safely remove a roof or will it rain? It affects our mood — are we relaxed or all stressed out? Even our health depends on weather conditions and so people move to different areas of our country.

Floods or tornadoes can cause great damage and change our lives. Both financially and physically. I remember the disastrous flood of 1972 and the ruined machinery it left behind on our dairy farm. But, one always tells oneself that it could have been worse.

Agronomist Offers Fall Nutrient Management Tips

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)—As the weather gets cool and the leaves turn color, Pennsylvania farmers should be carefully planning their nutrient management strategy for the fall and winter months.

But many farmers delay or ignore fertility planning during the busy fall harvest season, said Dr. Douglas Beegle, professor of agronomy in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "It is economically and environmentally important to make time for nutrient management," he said.

The first step in the process is the soil test. "Fall is the best time of year to perform soil tests," said Beegle. "It's the time when nutrient levels are lowest, so you can get a good idea of what nutrients are needed most in your fertility program. Fall testing also gives farmers plenty of time before spring to get results back and make good decisions about the types and quantities of nutrients to apply."

Whether a farmer has soil tests in the spring or fall, it's important that they be done at the same time each year, Beegle said. "That way you can get consistent data and keep track of trends in your soil's nutrient levels."

Autumn is a time when a lot of manure is spread on fields, although the ideal time to apply manure is in the spring, closer to the time of peak plant growth. If you do plan a fall manure application, Beegle says it is important to plan carefully and not arbitrarily apply equal amounts to all fields.

"Fields should be prioritized, based on several factors," he said. "High priority fields should be those that test low for various nutrients, or those going into corn next season, since corn needs a lot of nitrogen. Also, consider fall or winter manure application for fields that usually are wet in the spring, so you can avoid digging ruts or compacting soft soil." He said fields to avoid in the fall are those on steep slopes or near streams, where nutrients are likely to wash off before they can be utilized by next year's crops.

Before deciding how much manure to apply, said Beegle, have it analyzed so you know what you are spreading on the fields. Then, take into account the nutrient needs of the crops you plan to raise. It also is a good idea to calibrate your manure spreader to be sure the correct amount is being applied.

Planting a winter cover crop in the fall is usually a sound decision for a couple of reasons, according to Beegle. Without a cover crop, only about 20 percent of the nitrogen in the manure applied this fall will still be available to new crops next spring. By planting a winter grain or a cover crop, such as wheat or rye respectively, you can increase nitrogen utilization to about 40 percent. "The cover crop will scavenge nitrogen so it can't be lost," said Beegle. "Then when it's killed or plowed under in the spring, that nitrogen will be released for the next crop."

Beegle said a cover crop also will help drought-stricken farmers by providing forage for livestock feed. "A winter cover crop can help farmers overcome this year's short forage crops by giving them something to put in their silos in early May." He said cover crops can be planted as late as November, but the earlier they are planted, the more nutrients they will take up before winter sets in and the more yield they will produce in the spring.

7,410 Pa. Acres Offered

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman announced that preliminary figures indicate approximately 1.18 million acres have been offered for enrollment in the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) during the Sept. 11-22 sign-up period.

Producers in Pennsylvania submitted 224 bids to enroll 7,410 acres in CRP.

USDA can accept about 651,000 acres of the total offered because this was the amount of acreage participants withdrew from the CRP under the "early out" opportunity announced May 5. Because of the relatively small acreage scheduled, the bidding and enrollment process was modified to ensure that only the most environmentally-sensitive lands are accepted.

Bidders will be notified of acceptance or rejection of their bids after Nov. 15.

HOW EARLY FEED OR NUTRIENT RESTRICTION AFFECTS BROILER GROWTH, EFFICIENCY AND FAT DEPOSITION

H. S. Siegel, Ph.D.
Professor Of
Poultry Science

Increased carcass fat that accompanies the rapid growth of the modern broiler is a health concern of the consumer and often adds to the waste management problems of the processor. Various nutritional and management methods have been tried to control fat accumulation by restricting nutrient intake during the early growth period and then providing full feed for the latter part of the growth period, which then allows the birds to attain market weights equivalent to birds full-fed throughout the growth period. These methods depend on the compensatory (ie - "catch-up") growth phenomenon first described for animals by Osborne and Mendel (1915), and then for chickens by Marks (1979). The phenomenon shows that a resumption of growth may occur after growth is restricted.

Plavnik and coworkers in a series of experiments (1986, 1988, 1990) reported that severely restricting feed intake from 7 to 14 days of age resulted in equivalent body weights in full-fed broilers by 49 days of age, but not by 42 days of age, the usual market age for broilers in the U.S. However, improved feed conversion and reduced abdominal fat usually accompanied the compensatory growth. Because severe feed restriction may entail difficulties in feed distribution, with some birds receiving a greater amount of feed than others, other methods of restricting feed or specific nutrient intake have been proposed that would allow continuous presentation of feed. These methods include voluntary restriction by chemical means (Fancher and Jensen, 1988), protein and sodium deficiency (Plavnik and Hurwitz, 1990), or dilution of the ration by adding poorly digestible oat hulls (Leeson and coworkers, 1991). In a recent report Deaton (1995) found that in male broilers growth was attenuated by about 8% by restricting feed intake by 10% between 7 and 14 days of age, and that the birds compensated sufficiently, such that weights were equivalent to full fed birds by 6 weeks of age. However, if the males had an 18% or greater reduction in body weight (due to 25 to 40% feed restriction) then they were unable to fully compensate for the early weight loss by the 6-week market age. Similar results were obtained with females. In both sexes complete compensatory growth was attained by 7 weeks of age. However, in contrast to the work of Plavnik and coworkers, although compensatory growth did occur and feed conversion was improved by early feed restriction, Deaton did not find that abdominal fat was reduced in the broiler strain he used. His results agreed with a number of reports by others (Summers and coworkers, 1990; Pinchasov and Jensen, 1989; Yu and coworkers, 1990; Fontana and coworkers, 1993; and, Scheidler and Baughman, 1993). How can we explain these apparent contradictions? In research conducted at Penn State, Sizemore and Siegel (1993) tested the effects of reducing the energy concentration of the ration to broilers from 0 to 3 weeks of age, while keeping protein and other nutrients constant, then supplying all birds with complete, full fed rations for the finals weeks, ie - until market age. These rations were fed to females of four different broiler crosses. Two of the crosses were fast growing stocks that differed in the percentage of carcass fat. The third cross was from a male broiler line mated to a dwarf female line and the fourth cross was a slower growing stock used for roaster production. Our objective was to determine if divergent broiler types would respond differently to dietary energy concentrations for the first three weeks.

We found that, overall, the female broilers tended to respond to the lower energy diets during the early growth period by attaining higher body weights by 7 weeks of age. that is, However, although some growth compensation had occurred, feed conversion was poorer. Of interest was the fact that not all crosses responded equally. The body weights of the fast growing cross that tended toward higher carcass fat were generally unaffected by differences in dietary energy during the early period, whereas the more lean cross was affected by differences in energy level. Furthermore, there were differences among the crosses for carcass fat. In the rapidly growing cross, which tended to have the highest percentage of TOTAL carcass fat, the effect of higher energy during the early period (0-3 wk) was a reduction in abdominal fat during the later growth period (3-7 wk). The same result was not true for the three other crosses used. Therefore, the reason that results on early feed restriction are often contradictory is that the genetic makeup of the broiler may interact with its response to the nutritive content of the diet and change the final result. Growers and broiler companies should be aware of these interactions when deciding on broiler crosses for their particular requirements.

THINK CONCRETE WHEN PLANNING YOUR FEED STORAGE!!

"This is the kind of silo you need to protect your valuable feed."

The major costs on dairy and livestock farms are related to FEED: production...harvesting...storage...purchases...delivery to animals. Significant savings in time and money are possible when you store and deliver your feed from a poured concrete silo.

"As margins narrow, dairymen need to invest in efficiency: This can have as great an influence on Profit as milk price changes."

Protect your valuable feeds from rain, sleet, snow, mud, ice, wind and the sun's heat. Reduce the stress. INCREASE THE EFFICIENCY OF YOUR FEEDS, LABOR, AND LIVESTOCK!

At Sollenberger Silos Corp. we know a lot about feed storage and handling; we've been in the business since 1908. If your plans call for new feed storage, give us a call...We'd like to contribute to your success!!

NO USED SILOS!
NO REBUILT SILOS!
NO PRE-OWNED SILOS!
ALL NEW FOR YOU.

LAPP'S BARN EQUIPMENT

CURTAIN SYSTEMS

Lapp's Curtain System

Lapp's insulated curtains can help you make your farm more efficient. You can save up to 30% on your fuel/energy costs while maintaining a comfortable climate enables livestock to feed into live weight more efficiently, the curtain makes your barn warmer in winter and cooler in summer.

Our curtains are available in both 4 and 6 ply, both of which are faced with a impervious white vinyl layer which faces the elements. With all these benefits, the average payback is two years!

A lower cost alternative to the insulated curtains, are Lapp's single layer curtains. You still get all the benefits of using a high quality curtain to keep the elements outside and being able to lower the curtain to naturally ventilate in your barn.

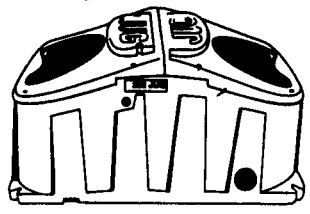
The cleanest waterer ever invented!

Self-cleaning
The JUG is designed so that debris and feed are sucked up from the feed trap in the bowl with each watering; debris won't foul the water.

Low-maintenance
Light-tight design so that algae and odors won't build-up in The JUG's interior.

Animals adapt easily
The JUG is designed so that animals, even calves, can suck water naturally, no balls or flaps to get in the way.

The JUG
Large Livestock Waterer



Choose 1, 2 or 4 bowl, energy-free, or energy-efficient models.

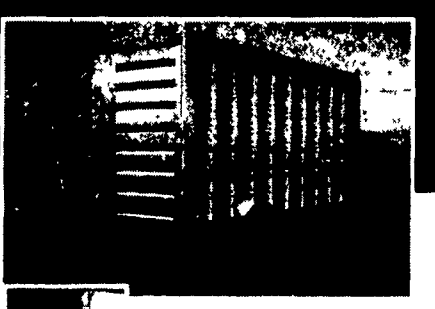
Agriculture Moves on EBY Bodies



M.H. Eby custom-builds aluminum truck bodies for the agri-transportation market. Nobody offers more sizes and options in:

- LIVESTOCK BODIES - Lengths to 32', choice of heights and widths.
- GRAIN BODIES - Lengths to 24'; landscape and general purpose dumps to 12'.
- FLATBED BODIES - Lengths to 32', choice of 5 widths.

For greater payload capacity, Eby's aluminum design is equal in strength to steel and up to 40% lighter. Our corrosion-resistant components never need painting. That means minimum maintenance, improved appearance and higher resale value.

Eby products have superior standard features. And we offer custom options for virtually any application. Agriculture is your business- building bodies to haul it is ours.

Let EBY custom build one for you.

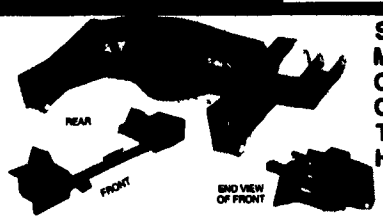
KELDERMAN AIR RIDE

SMOOTH



SMOOTH

Adding a Kelderman Air Ride Conversion system to your present suspension will result in a two stage suspension system. This is not to be confused with adding an Air bag mounted above the axle. Allows adding extra spring leafs to increase load rating and still maintain Air-Ride comfort.

The bolt on basic package utilizes an air stem mounted in a convenient location to add or remove air from the system

Optional 12 volt compressor allows changing air pressure setting on the go.

Currently available for front and rear suspension in Dodge Series 250 & 350 trucks Available soon for Dodge Dakota models

Also available for some Ford, Chevy and GMC truck models Special orders available for most motor homes. This option will smooth out the ride on those rough-road fishing/camping trips

Penn State Announces Teleconferences On Dairy Nutrition

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Dairy farmers who want to boost production and safeguard the health of their cows should attend Penn State's 1996 Dairy Nutrition Workshops: Current Concepts in Dairy Nutrition.

The workshops are to be offered as a satellite teleconference throughout Pennsylvania and across the United States on Feb. 22 and 29, 1996.

Hosted by experts in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences in collaboration with local cooperative extension agents, the workshops combine technical information about feeding dairy cows with the latest management practices.

The workshops feature video presentations, nutrition exercises and discussions led by local county agents, as well as phone-in question and answer sessions with Penn State's dairy nutrition specialists.

The workshops will rely heavily on hands-on activities. "We've developed a very interactive format," said Jud Heinrichs, professor of dairy science, who is coordinating the event with Virginia Ishler, extension assistant in dairy and animal science.

"Producers will use information from their own operation to evaluate their feeding systems. They also will learn about ways to use nutrition to maximize production and keep cows healthy," Heinrichs said.

Other faculty involved in the workshop include Penn State dairy nutritionist Dr. Lisa Holden and Penn State agronomist Dr. Greg Roth.

"The county agent or site coordinator is an integral part of this program, because that person will help teach the program and facilitate discussions," Heinrichs said.

"Each site can include local issues in the workshop, while the satellite allows us to augment our program with unique footage of people, places and items that otherwise wouldn't be available to a local audience."

The first day of the workshop, Feb. 22, will focus on silage fermentation and its effect on forage quality.

"We will explore ways to prevent and cope with problems in various storage structures, including balage," said Heinrichs. "We also will consider silage additives and discuss how to handle mycotoxins."

Participants should bring a sample of their own milking cow silages for use in the first day's activities.

The workshop session on Feb. 29 will begin with an examination of factors related to concentrate feeding management and how those factors influence dairy cow nutrition. Forage quality and intake also will be discussed.

The program will be offered at many sites in Pennsylvania and the United States. Registration will be limited to the seating capacity at each site.

The $30 registration fee covers one or more people from the same dairy operation. Each session will start at 9:45 a.m. and end at 3 p.m. with a half hour for lunch.

START PLANNING FOR NEXT YEAR

The 1995 growing season is quickly drawing to a close. By the time you're reading this we may have already had our first frost (I'm writing this on Oct. 15).

By now you probably know how successful this past year has been for you in terms of profits.

Now is the time to start planning for next year — what can/will you do differently to make your bottom line improve? Since most of the crops are out of the field by now I'm going to start focusing on next season in my columns and try to provide some information that will help you improve the profitability of your operation.

Fruit

The harvest period is when most growers spend more time in the field than any other time of the year. While most of this time is spent supervising harvest crews, hopefully you took some time to evaluate the overall orchard situation.

Was the fruit adequately colored? Was the crop adequately thinned?

Did you obtain satisfactory insect and disease control? Are your trees showing the desired 12 to 18 inches of terminal growth?

If you observed any situation that resulted in less than optimum fruit quality, now is when you should make plans to correct the situation for next year.

Poor fruit color can be corrected by opening up the tree canopy during dormant pruning or perhaps you should try some summer pruning next year. Thinning is a difficult procedure to perfect and careful notes of your methods and results this year can be used to help make adjustments next year.

Insect or disease problems also indicate a need to adjust your spray schedule or perhaps use alternate chemicals to improve control. A heavy crop will reduce growth below the desired levels as will inadequate nitrogen fertilization. Poor weed control can also cause a reduction in tree growth as well as contribute to other problems. Too much growth can be an indication of the opposite situation.

I believe strongly that careful observations are necessary each and every year to improve the profitability of the operation. If there were some aspects of your cultural program that you did not evaluate by using field observations, be sure to collect what information you can now before our first good freeze occurs.

One consistent observation I've made in my time in this business is that the best growers are always keenly aware of the situation within their orchards at any point in time.

Vegetables

Mike Orzolek from Penn State is warning that an effect of this summer's drought may be herbicide carryover in 1996. Since water is needed to activate both herbicides and the microbes which break down the compounds, this summer's rain deficiency may cause problems next year.

This is especially true if there was little or no rainfall during the first 6 to 8 weeks after applying herbicides for fall crops.

Factors affecting the carryover into next year include herbicide type, rate of herbicide application, crop rotation restrictions, and time of application.

If application rates were high, a compound applied to the soil with little or no rainfall afterward or the use of a compound with crop rotation restrictions on the label may give you reason to consider a soil bioassay for herbicide carryover before planting in 1996.

A critical factor for a soil bioassay is a thorough sampling of the field in question. Mike recommends splitting a 6-inch deep soil sample into two samples: the top 3 inches and the 3- to 6-inch depth to more accurately indicate where the problems of carryover are located.

Composite soil samples are placed in 16-ounce paper cups or 4-inch plastic pots and planted with oats and cucumbers (crops sensitive to triazines and other herbicide families).

Be sure to record the number of seeds planted in each container. After planting, water the seeds in and place the containers in a location with adequate sunlight and a temperature of about 70 F.

Water the containers as necessary to germinate the seeds. The rate of emergence, total percent germination, and rate of early plant growth are used as indicators of herbicide residue in the soil.

Recent information from Penn State indicates that more changes will occur to the upcoming "Vegetable Production Guide" than have occurred over the last several years combined. This is a result of the deletion of some labels, the addition of several labels, and new ways of working with some of the labels.

Some of the deletions or phase-outs in the guide are expected to be on rotenone, PBO, MSR, possibly permethrin materials (Ambush or Pounce), disyston, and the granular formulation of Furadan. Expect to see new usages or additions of Warrior, Agrimek, Baythroid, Admire/Provado, and Neemix along with Align.

There may also be a few more additions to the guide; these will depend upon the results of ongoing discussions.

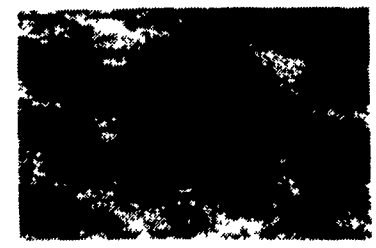
Deere Introduces Five-Section Chisel Plow

MOLINE, Ill. — John Deere has introduced its five-section 685 chisel plow that features improved residue flow and more precise depth control and is sized to meet the needs of large farming operations.

The 685 chisel plow replaces the 1650 chisel plow in the product line.

The new machine is available in working widths from 47 to 61 feet with either 12-inch or 16-inch shank spacing. The new four-bar frame provides 124 inches of fore-aft clearance to enhance residue flow through the machine.

The 1¼ x 2-inch spring-reset standards permit an underframe clearance of 28 inches, which adds to the machine's residue handling capability.



The John Deere 685 chisel plow is a five-section machine available in working widths from 47 to 61 feet to meet the needs of large farming operations. It replaces the 1650 chisel plow and features improved residue flow as well as more precise depth control.

An optional coil-tine harrow features a three-bar design with 15-inch fore-aft clearance between bars and 16-inch tines to help residue flow through easily.

A new crank-adjustable, single-point depth control enables the operator to make accurate, repeatable depth changes with a convenient handle located at the front of the machine. The heavy-duty rockshaft and walk-over tandem wheels provide consistent, level working depth in varying soil and residue conditions. An adjustment wrench is provided for leveling the wings.

Ripper Eliminates Finishing Pass

RACINE, Wis. — The Case IH 6800 Combo-mulch Ripper combines a disk harrow and deep-till subsoiler to eliminate a finishing pass through the fields — an important savings for farmers interested in a systems approach to conservation compliance.

"With the 6800, the farmer conserves topsoil, time and fuel," said Bill Hoeg, Case product specialist-implements.

Designed as a primary tillage tool, the 6800 features a caddy cart design with underslung disk gangs supported by the three-point hitch, and a rear-mounted subsoil ripper. This system makes possible independent operation and adjustment of each tool to match field conditions and residue-management plans.

The Case IH 6800 Combo-mulch Ripper combines a disk harrow and deep-tillage subsoiler to eliminate a finishing pass through the fields.

The new ripper is a streamlined, true-V design. Standard shanks are 20 inches. Heavy-duty shanks are 24 inches. Shank spacing is adjustable from 20 to 40 inches, depending on the model selected. The ripper is available in 11-foot 8-inch, 13-foot 7-inch, 15-foot 6-inch and 19-foot 4-inch widths.

Chester County DHIA will hold its annual banquet on Thursday, Dec. 7, at the West Fallowfield Christian School near Atglen.

The program will begin with a roast beef dinner at 7 p.m. The directors are offering the meal at a discounted price of $5 for adults, $3 for children 3 to 10, and under 3 years old is free.

Some of the funds that were in the treasury when the county merged with Pa. DHIA in June are being used to subsidize the dinner as a means to return the money to members.

Besides the fine meal, there will be awards and reports on new programs and state organization business from Dean Amick, Pa. DHIA staff, and Norm Hershey, Pa. DHIA director. Learn about the new MUN test that can be done on milk at the testing lab. There will be time for questions and discussion.

Tickets can be purchased from the following DHIA technicians up to Nov. 29. Patty Becker (717) 355-9262; Wendy Harris (717) 442-9648; Bob Poole (610) 932-8579; Dean Cheeks (610) 932-9180; Gerry Miller (610) 932-9047.

If any Chester County dairy farmers are interested in testing, they should contact the above list of technicians. With profit margins extremely tight on dairy operations, DHIA testing is more important than ever. And, there are a wide variety of programs that can fit any budget or any size farm. Don't let low producers, poor protein and fat testers, and cows with high somatic cell counts steal your profits.

Udder Health (Milking) School

A two-day school focusing on udder health and milking procedures will be offered in Chester County on Mondays, Nov. 13 and 20.

The first session will be at the Cochranville Fire Hall on the 13th from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. On the 20th, the program will be held at the same time at Walmoore Farm, Unit 2 on Route 41.

Folks still call this a milking school, but the program is much more comprehensive.

Day one will feature presentations on the cost of mastitis, understanding the functioning of the udder, proper milking procedures, and producing a quality product.

At the farm on day two, milking system checks will be covered along with stray voltage concerns and cow comfort issues.

In the afternoon, Dr. Julie Williams, Laffey Veterinary Clinic, and Dr. Mikala Kristula, New Bolton Center, will cover a veterinarian's approach to mastitis, including prevention, treatment, culturing, CMT and SCC monitoring, and preventing antibiotic residues in milk.

This is an excellent opportunity for a herdsman, milkers, children, and even the owner/operator to take an in-depth program on the proper handling of the milking procedure on the farm. After all, this is the most important time spent on a dairy farm every day.

The registration deadline is Monday, Nov. 6, and the cost for the program materials plus two lunches is only $20 per person. Call (610) 696-3500 today for reservations. The school is limited to 20 people.

WHAT IS THE PURPOSE OF A JUNIOR LIVESTOCK PROJECT?

What do the following statements have in common?

- Bragging rights for the coming year!
- Promotion of someone's breeding program!
- The sheer thrill of winning!
- Making money for next year's project!
- Funding a college education!

All of the aforementioned statements have been used previously to justify the existence of junior livestock projects. Are these really the reasons why we continue to put considerable time and effort into junior livestock projects, programs, and shows?

If they are, maybe we should rethink our purpose!

Following publication of the initial article in this column, several people suggested that the second article should focus on our purpose. To this end, I pose two similar questions, "What is the purpose of a junior livestock project?," or stated another way, "What are the objectives for youth enrolled in junior livestock projects?"

I have a personal opinion about how to answer these questions, but I will reserve it for later in the article.

Information dealing with the subject of "purpose" is readily available in a number of publications. The North Carolina Sheep Planning Guide states four objectives: 1) To use sheep project activities as a tool in the total development of youth in 4-H. This is especially adapted to rural nonfarm and certain urban situations; 2) To provide learning experience in livestock production; 3) To develop an appreciation of livestock among youth who may not be able to handle other types of large animal projects; and, 4) To provide opportunities for demonstrating skills learned in selecting, producing, fitting and showing sheep.

Eight overall objectives of a 4-H livestock program, as listed in another North Carolina publication, are as follows: 1) To develop leadership abilities, build character, and assume citizenship responsibilities; 2) To experience the pride of owning livestock and to be responsible for its management; 3) To be better prepared for citizenship responsibilities through working in groups and supporting community livestock educational projects and activities; 4) To learn skills in livestock production and gain an understanding of the business of breeding, raising, and promoting livestock and their end products; 5) To increase knowledge of safety precautions needed to prevent injury to yourself and others while working with livestock; 6) To promote greater love for animals and a humane attitude toward them; 7) To teach good sportsmanship through a friendly, competitive atmoshpere; and, 8) To increase knowledge of animal agricultural by-products and how animal by-product usage touches our lives each and every day.

The following information can be found in the North Central Region Extension Publication, "4-H Skills for Life Animal Science Series, Swine 1 Squeal Appeal, Project Activity Guide.":

"Learning about pigs isn't all you will be doing. You'll also be learning about yourself too. Many of the things you'll learn are skills you'll use all your life such as speaking to groups, working with other people, making decisions, being responsible, planning and organizing, and learning to learn."

Lastly, the North Central Region Extension Publication, "4-H Skills for Life Animal Science Series, Beef Group Activity Guide, Project Helper's Guide," clearly states a primary objective of developing life skills: "The primary purpose of these materials is to help youth develop important life skills by involving them in fun and challenging animal-related, learn-by-doing experiences. Life skills included are: learning to learn, making decisions, relating to others, communicating, leading self and others, planning and organizing, and solving problems. But what are life skills? Why are they important? A life skill is many things. It enables people to recognize and respond to significant life events, participate in an interdependent society, be self-directing and productive, lead a satisfying life and contribute to society, and function effectively in a changing world."

Firstly, none of the listed objectives deal with finances or the potential financial rewards of these projects. The North Carolina 4-H Market Lamb project book even goes so far as to state, "You may not make money when you feed lambs for show. It costs more to feed show lambs than it does to feed lambs in commercial feedlots. You will probably find that feed costs, the price of lambs, and equipment costs are higher than they would be for commercial production. If you enroll in the 4-H market lamb project just to make money and do not consider the value of what you can learn from the project, you may be disappointed."

Secondly, only a few of the previously listed objectives focus on technical subject matter associated with a particular species. Although some of the collective reasons for participating in junior livestock projects include learning and applying production skills for a particular species, we are not training solely the next generation of commercial swine or beef cattle producers. Undoubtedly, a few of the participants in junior livestock projects certainly will continue their education toward these career goals, but the vast majority will not.

Lastly, most of the aforementioned objectives inherently strive toward more lofty goals of better preparing our youth for the changes, challenges and uncertainties of life in their communities, the United States, and even the world during the next few decades. Herein lies the truest, most essential purpose for junior livestock programs, and we must continue to focus our efforts on objectives that uphold this purpose.

So, why do I continue to actively encourage youth to participate in junior livestock projects and youth livestock activities? Why am I an avid proponent of junior livestock activities?

It comes down to three fundamental characteristics of adults who have benefited from youth livestock project work, and the basic ideals behind these characteristics: 1) Most successful people desire to surround themselves with bright, talented, highly-motivated young people and adults who have "Learned-by-doing" and continue "Learning to learn" . . . a basic premise of 4-H exemplified in youth livestock project work; 2) Social and life skills will become more, not less, important in the future. All of us should want to be part of a larger group that can successfully lead, relate to, and work with self and others . . . life skills developed through interaction with animals and other people with common interests are inherent to junior livestock projects; and, 3) Active participation in society involves planning and organizing, communicating, solving problems, taking responsibility, and making decisions . . . skills developed through junior livestock projects and club work.

One final point. I found this adaptation of the 4-H Pledge in another publication from the North Carolina Cooperative Extension Service, and I believe it is worth reprinting in this context. The 4-H Pledge reads as follows:

I pledge . . . My HEAD to clearer thinking . . . Working with animals provides mental relaxation from schoolroom studies and at the same time stimulates quick thinking and alertness. My HEART to greater loyalty . . . The close bond of comradeship which develops between animal and master, and among young people planning and working together in a common interest toward a common goal is conducive to a deepening sense of loyalty and consideration of others. My HANDS to larger service . . . Working with livestock builds confidence by teaching youth to utilize new methods of livestock management and marketing. My HEALTH to better living . . . Outdoor activities affect each nerve, muscle, and organ of the body in a healthful way. For my club, my community, my country, and my WORLD. . . .

The associations and varied activities in 4-H club work provide many opportunities for young people to prepare themselves for active participation in the social and economic life of their community, country, and world.

What will your response be the next time you are asked, "What is the purpose, or what are the objectives of a junior livestock project?"

Md. Has National Winners In Event

COLLEGE PARK, Md.—Aerospace competition made its first appearance at this year's National 4-H Engineering, Science and Leadership Event, held Sept. 24-26 at West Lafayette, Ind.

Maryland had three national winners among its 11 youth delegates participating in seven contests.

Shawn and Erin Roberts, a brother-sister team from Pleasantville (Washington County), placed first in the national 4-H aerospace contest. They also were the first-place team in the first statewide 4-H aerospace competition, held July 30 in Westminster, Md. Both are Frederick County 4-H members.

Winning national recognition is nothing new for the Roberts duo. Shawn, 17, and Erin, 18, are past national winners in bicycle competition at the 4-H engineering event.

Ross and Mac Bair, two brothers from Bachman Mills (Carroll County), placed fourth in the national 4-H aerospace competition. Ross is 14 and Mac is 16.

Jeffrey Fritz, 17, of Marston (Carroll County) took top honors in the national 4-H automotive contest. He teamed with Corby King, 18, of Cherry Hill (Cecil County) to place third in the 4-H automotive team competition.

David Myers, 16, of Frizzellburg (Carroll County) placed second in the national 4-H compact tractor contest. Jeffrey Martin, 17, of Montgomery Village (Montgomery County) made a good showing in the national 4-H computer contest.

Also representing Maryland were Jason Thompson, 18, of Pine Haven (Anne Arundel County) in the bicycle contest; David O'Hara, 17, of Mount Pleasant (Frederick County), small engines; and Joseph Biser, 16, of New Midway (Frederick County), tractor contest.

"It was a good, strong competition," said Bob Shirley, extension 4-H agent in Carroll County and a chaperon for the Maryland youth delegation. "Nobody breezed through a contest, by any means."

Dr. David Ross, an agricultural engineering Extension specialist from the University of Maryland at College Park, also accompanied the Maryland group for contests on the Purdue University campus at West Lafayette, Ind., and the Tippecanoe County Fairground across the Wabash River in Lafayette, Ind.

This was the first time in 44 years that the National 4-H Engineering Event was not held at Richmond, Va., in connection with the State Fair of Virginia and Atlantic Rural Exposition.

The Indiana Cooperative Extension Service has agreed to sponsor the event through 1997, with cooperation from participating states, the Tippecanoe County Extension Service, and the Mid-America Equipment Retailers Association. Adult volunteers from the Indiana state 4-H tractor and electric committees assisted with running the contests.

Md. Governor Asks For Disaster Assessment Reports

ANNAPOLIS, Md.—Governor Parris N. Glendening asked the Maryland State Emergency Board of the U.S. Department of Agriculture to prepare disaster assessment reports to determine if farmers in Wicomico, Worcester, Somerset, Dorchester, Talbot, Queen Anne's, Caroline, Kent, St. Mary's, Charles, Calvert, Anne Arundel and Prince George's counties qualify for emergency loans due to crop losses resulting from this summer's heat and lack of rain.

"The excessive heat and the prolonged drought in many of the key agricultural regions of the state are costing Maryland farmers millions of dollars. These losses are mounting each day," Governor Glendening said.

"In my travels around Maryland, I have seen the stress that the heat and lack of rain have caused on many of our farmrs. Therefore, I have requested that these damage assessment reports be prepared, so that we can then request from the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture a Natural Disaster Determination for the appropriate counties," the governor said.

Governor Glendening requested that the Maryland State Emergency Board report back to him with its estimates of crop losses by Oct. 7. If losses are substantial, he will then formally request a Natural Disaster Declaration from U.S. Department of Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman for the appropriate counties.

"I want to make certain that any Maryland farmer who qualifies and would benefit from the emergency loan program has the opportunity to do so," Governor Glendening said.

Farmers in counties that receive the Natural Disaster Determination are eligible to apply for emergency loans from the Farmers Home Administration. Farmers in adjacent counties are also eligible to apply for emergency loans. Preliminary estimates indicate that soybean crops have been hit hard by the lack of rain, particularly on the Eastern Shore and in Southern Maryland.

Maryland farmers last qualified for disaster assistance during a severe drought in 1993.

SERIES 5000 LAGOON PUMPS & SPREADER TANKS

Van Dale Tanks are built to last with 1/4" steel plate and the best warranty in the business. And there's one built to match your needs in sizes from 2700 - 5500 gallon capacities. Whichever you choose, you won't go wrong with a Waste Handler from Van Dale.

Strength, power and reliability. It's all here with the new Series 5000 Lagoon Pumps. These pumps have the perfect combination of agitation volume and pressure needed to break up hard surface crust or bottom manure solids with speed and power. And with up to 5000 G.P.M. agitation capacity it can blast a stream of manure 100 or more in any direction to create an easy pumping and spreading slurry. The new Series 5000 trailer mounted or 3-point hitch, by far the fastest and easiest to operate pumps on the market.

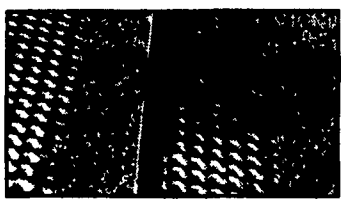
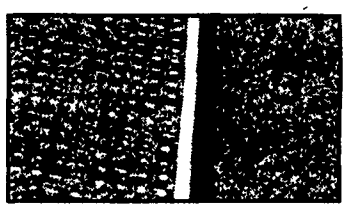
Leveling your hills...

The brilliantly simple Dynamic Hillside Compensation System, optional on MF 8400 conventional combines, gives you "flat land" performance on slopes up to 20 degrees. All automatically. And all at a surprisingly low cost.

Stop in today for all the details.



Without Hillside System, crops overload the lower side of the sieve, causing high losses and low sample quality.



With MF's Hillside System, crops are automatically spread evenly across the sieve for top performance.

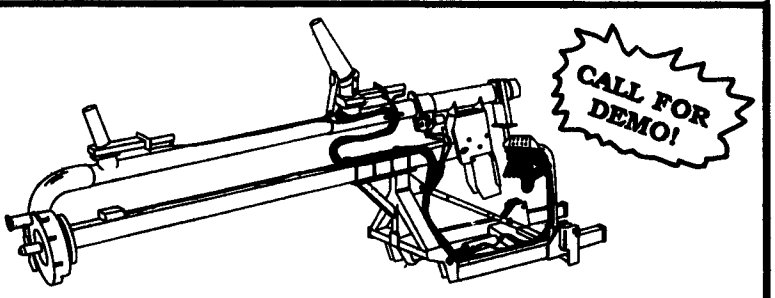
MANURE HAPPENS!

Badger

Badger's New Turbo Pit Pump is designed to handle it!



NEW Model BN500 Turbo Pit Pump!

The pump designed for the big, tough jobs!

- Here it is! The pit pump with the agitation capacity of 4 - 5,000 GPM. Here's a pit pump that is built farm tough to last year after year.
- The 6-blade impellor and a turbo flow pump inlet provides maximum cutting action and aggressive flow at maximum pressure.
- The lower bearing is designed with a 5-seal system and a totally enclosed oil-bath housing. A conveniently located reservoir, grease lines and fittings make it easy to maintain.
- The tapered upper nozzle is designed with a stainless steel ball pivot with a vertical range of 55 degrees to break up and blast through thick crust.
- The hydraulic control console features a 4-spool valve that controls all pump agitation requirements, putting all the major pump controls in the hands of the operator at one location.

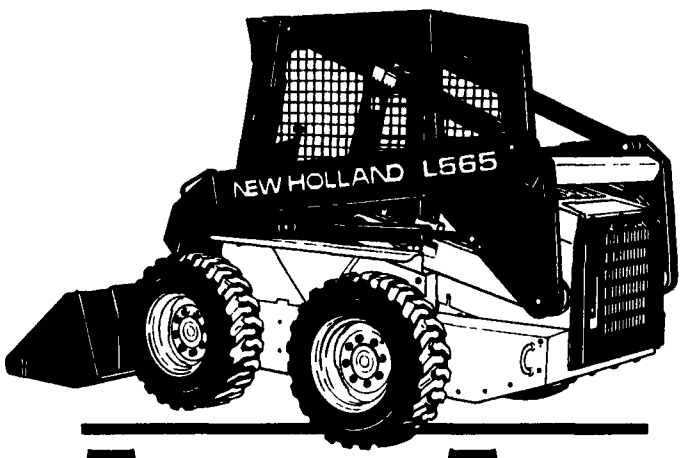
THE RELIABLE ONE



TOUGHER THAN THE REST

The New Holland Model L565 Super Boom™ skid-steer loader is tougher, more durable and more reliable than ever.

The "L565" offers a 40 horsepower diesel engine with an SAE load rating of a powerful 1,500 pounds.

The Pick Up 'n Go™ universal attachment system makes it compatible with New Holland and competitive attachments. The strong boom design and massive loader pins make it more reliable. And the quick engine access makes it easier to service.

See what makes the Super Boom so tough.

CLAAS® Rollant round balers give you what you want

—one quality round bale after another.

Discover Quality...Discover Value...

The Rollant 66 makes fast work of 4'x5' bales. Its unique two-stage pick-up and close tines produce a clean, efficient harvest in less time. Rollatex netting wraps a bale in 10 seconds or less, and double-twine wraps it up in just 20.

The Rollant 46 introduced CLAAS's innovative fixed bale chamber to the marketplace. This versatile baler handles all farm operations from dry hay to silage. Nobody produces a better 4'x4' bale.

The Rollant 42 was designed for family livestock operations. This economical investment produces weather-tight 4'x4' bales for the highest nutrient content possible.

CLAAS bales mean nutrient-filled edible hay, low spoilage, and high crude protein retention.

Each Rollant offers the innovative chamber, low-profile pick-up, and world class dependability. And they all share CLAAS's international reputation for low maintenance, durability and long-life.

Call now to see how you can improve the round figures on your bottom line.

Lancaster County Herd RHA Increases By Over 1,800 lbs. After 8 Months on AIM™

SPRING LAWN FARM

Joe & Dave Garber
Lancaster, PA

"We had been having trouble getting cows to peak out and hold over 100 lbs. of milk. Since we started following the AIM™ program, our average second calf heifers peaks are 108 lbs. with mature cows averaging 105 lbs. at peak. Our cows are consistently holding their peaks for 2-3 test days.

The service from Sensenig's Feed Mill has been outstanding and we are very pleased with the entire package. The AIM™ Milk Replacer, along with the Calf and Heifer Feeds have been a great addition to our program."

EQUIPMENT FOR FINANCIAL DECISIONS

Roland P. Freund
Farm Management Agent
Penn State

There are more pressures bearing down upon our farmers today than this generation has formerly experienced.

We seem to be getting clobbered by low milk and livestock prices, high feed costs, shrinking credit availability, drought, and molding feed supplies — all at once.

Under these conditions, many managers are experiencing difficulties trying to make decisions on how to improve their circumstances. There are no easy answers, and every farm has its own unique situation.

Each manager has to do a lot of searching before he or she can make a decision. There is nothing new about this process, but we do have some tools that can help us make better management decisions.

Before any decision can be reached we have to examine all the factors which are causing the problem. Then we can address those that we can change.

Unfortunately there are many things which any one manager or adviser cannot change.

Factors We Cannot Control

Political events have changed some of the landscape:

- Conservative Congress and Senate
- Balanced budget
- Shrinking government
- Trade agreements
- Environmental concerns.

The economic impact of these trends on the farm scene:

- Drought and disaster payments — gone!
- Price supports are being phasing out.
- Federal farm program dollars are being greatly reduced.
- Prices will be more volatile.

On the economic front we also see interest rates trending higher while our friendly local bank managers are disappearing in the shuffle of bank mergers.

Federal regulators are also forcing bankers to be more conservative when making new loans. The long and short of it is that Uncle Sam and your banker will not manage your business in the future.

Factors Over Which We Have Some Control

Operating costs have to be controlled to achieve profits. Capital spending has to be controlled if we are to have reasonable debt payments.

Family living and labor expenses need to be adequate, but should never be met by not paying feed bills.

Crop enterprise acreages and rotations and livestock production levels and scale can and should be adjusted to meet changing circumstances. In all of our enterprises we need to be searching for least cost inputs and cost controls.

Breeder Donates Simmental Semen To Thailand

BOZEMAN, Mont.—Jo Ann Srebnik, a Simmental cattle breeder from New York City, N.Y., has donated 3,000 units of Simmental cattle semen to Kasetsart University of Thailand.

The semen will be used in producer herds throughout Thailand to illustrate the positive advantages of crossbreeding domestic Zebu or Brahman cattle with American Simmental cattle.

Thailand is highly regarded as a progressive country with a rapidly growing economy. There is considerable interest among native cattle producers in the use of American beef genetics to improve production. U.S. semen and live cattle have been imported by Thailand during the past few years and such activity is expected to increase over the next few years.

The shipment of semen to Thailand was completed through the cooperative efforts of Ag-World Exports, Bloomington, Ill.; Aristocrat Land and Cattle, Plattsville, Colo.; Progressive Genetics, Winter Haven, Fla.; and the American Simmental Association, Bozeman, Mont.

How Will Decisions Be Made?

We can let decisions be made by default — let the salesman tell us. Tractor-seat thinking lets our emotions rule our minds.

We could use a consultant or adviser to help us, or we can rely on our own business analysis and dollars and cents calculations to evaluate our alternatives.

Which Alternatives Should Be Considered?

Many options should be explored. These might include, but not be limited to:

- Different markets, or value-added products
- Changing enterprises such as more production, more or less acres or animals
- Reduce debt by liquidating assets or buy more assets and increase debt
- Discontinue an enterprise, or discontinue farming.

Brainstorming can help a management team think of numerous possibilities. In many cases, one of these changes brings about a combination of other changes which must all be considered together.

How Do We Evaluate Alternatives?

Financial impact of a change should be measured in terms of:

- Profitability — how will it change "the bottom line."
- Liquidity — what will it do to "cash-flow."
- Solvency — how it affects net worth or "equity."

Other important criteria should include exposure to risk, labor needs, next generation impact, environmental impact, and personal satisfaction.

Some of these may be difficult to estimate. Ultimately we need to answer the question: "Will it help us to reach our family goals?"

Computers To The Rescue

We have seen that decision-making involves a mountain of computations. Many of you use computers to maintain records and do routine calculations.

Software is available that does the math to give you numbers which you can use for many of the evaluations outlined above. Farm management agents, bankers, and consultants in many states have been using FINPACK as a decision-making aid for many years. This is now available to farmers.

Is Farmer FINPACK For You?

It is not a record keeping program but it is:

- A great tool for business and enterprise analysis.
- An exceptional "what if?" projector.
- The best farm cash flow planner available at any price.

If you want to control your business into the next century, you'll need this tool. If you are planning a major change in the business, you should not be without it.

If you can run your own farm FINPACK, it will do more for you than Extension could do in a week of farm visits.

You will need an IBM-compatible computer with a 286 or higher processor, MS-DOS 2.1 or higher, a hard disk with 5MB of free space, 640K of RAM, a check for $295 or a credit card.

Orders And Support

For orders, information, and program support you can call the Center for Farm Financial Management, Minnesota, (800) 234-1111. They supply the program with a great, clearly written user's manual. Their friendly support staff are very helpful.

Appreciate Farm To Preserve Family Life

PAINTED POST, N.Y. — New Yorkers must begin to understand and appreciate the family farm if that particular segment of American life is to be preserved, said New York State Grange Master William S. Benson Jr.

Benson, speaking to hundreds of Grangers gathered here at the opening banquet of the Grange's 123rd Annual Session, outlined a number of reasons for the decline of dairy farming in New York State.

He pointed to milk prices that stand dormant in the face of ever-increasing production costs as a major culprit, and said that unfair — and often illegal — property tax assessments take their toll, as well.

"In one case, a New York millionaire started a dairy farm as a hobby. When his ag assessment took effect, the assessors raised his house and barn assessments to pay for it," Benson said. "Having the money, he took them to court and won. Unfortunately, the average farmer can't afford to take legal action."

Benson criticized milk pricing practices affecting New York dairy farmers as "ridiculous," and he was skeptical about 1995 Farm Bill attempts to "level the playing field" for eastern and Midwestern farmers.

"I believe that the playing field was already level," Benson said. "Now it will be tilted in favor of the Midwest."

Benson also rejected the notion that milk prices should not be raised for fear that consumers would be scared off of the product. "Children do not put root beer on cereal," Benson said. "The problem is not the increase in price to the consumer. The problem is that the increase would never get back to the farmer. Without some controls, the increase would be absorbed by the handlers, processors, distributors and retailers who already take whatever they need to turn a reasonable profit."

Benson said farmers feel threatened by large corporate farms, and said dairy farmers need to keep an eye on the House Agriculture Committee, made up of 49 representatives. Seven of those representatives are from California — the number one dairy state in the country — and none are from New York.

Benson urged farmers to get more involved in shaping the future of their industry. "Not nearly enough of the farmers are being seen and heard," he said. "There must be farmer involvement to get the various farm organizations on a common general path to the future."

Benson said farmers may have to consider a supply control among themselves, and that he's hearing more and more support for the dairy industry's move to a quota system. He said such a system would allow the supply and price of milk to stabilize, and that the farmer could derive a reasonable profit in exchange for the opportunity to expand.

Benson's keynote speech came after Grangers met and shared concerns with Donald Davidson, recently appointed commissioner of the state Department of Agriculture and Markets. "I'm counting on organizations like the Grange to keep me posted on what's going on out there," Davidson said. "That's vital."

Cab versions feature plenty of glass area and a console designed for quick and frequent use of controls for the transmission, hydraulics, PTO and hitch.
A standard, smooth-working 8F/4R transmission provides synchronized on-the-go shifting of four speeds within each of two ranges. Optional packages increase gear selection to 16F/8R; also optional is an 8F/8R shuttle transmission.
New nylon release disc and throw-out bearing with high-temp grease allow the heavy-duty clutch to stand up to the rigors of feedlot work and daylong tillage.

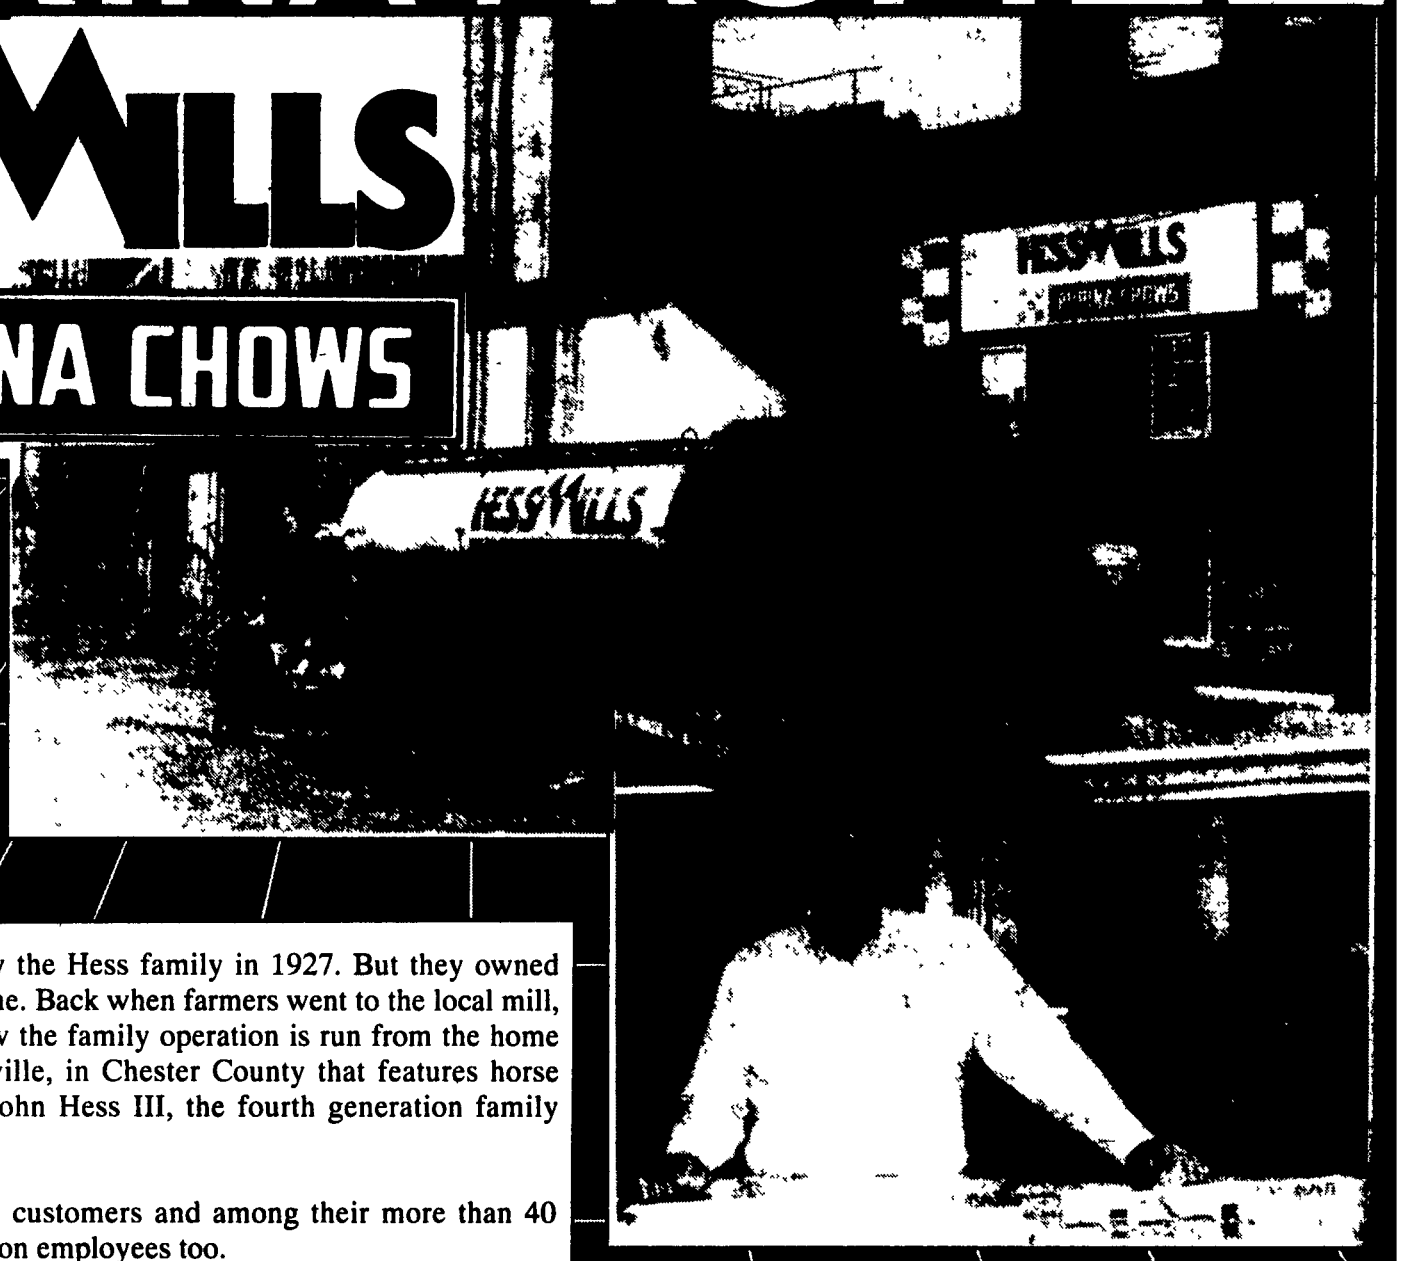
PURINA PROFILE

HESS MILLS

PURINA CHOWS



John (Jack) Hess II, has spent a lifetime as a Purina dealer. Hess Mills located on South Vintage Road has been in the family since 1927. Jack Hess, owner, talks with Dale Herr, one of his bulk feed truck drivers.

One of the oldest Purina dealerships east of the Mississippi River is Hess' Mill, Paradise. John (Jack) Hess II, owner, has lived and breathed Purina all of his 68 years. In fact, he likes to tell the story that his mother said he went to Purina meetings before he was born.

The mill located just under the railroad bridge on South Vintage Road was purchased by the Hess family in 1927. But they owned other Purina Mills before that time. Back when farmers went to the local mill, Jack had four locations. But now the family operation is run from the home mill and a feed store at Unionville, in Chester County that features horse feeds and is managed by son John Hess III, the fourth generation family Purina dealer.

Hess Mills has third generation customers and among their more than 40 workers, they have third generation employees too.

Today their main customer business is dairy. They have five consultants on the road to help farmers formulate their dairy feeds with Purina concentrates and home grains. Or customers may buy ready-made feeds from the mill. They have a large customer base of Amish farmers.

To be successful, Jack says you need to give good service and have a good product. Purina does extensive research to support customer needs.

The Purina Company has an awards program called the Chow Honor Council. Dealerships that meet certain standards are honored with special incentives. Jack Hess has been named for this award 29 times out of the last 36 years the program has been offered.

Even though Jack has spent a lifetime in the Purina feed business, he is not ready to retire. "This is a good area to work in," Jack said. "We have a good customer base and I have lost very little money from bad debts. When one member of a family is our customer, often other family members on other farms become our customers too. I have always said that I want to work until I'm eighty. As that time gets closer, I keep thinking about extending that retirement goal out a little further."
